New House for Labor

Dallas, Texas, Mar. 30.—As the fruit of nearly two years' agitation, a labor Temple is going up in Dallas. A site was purchased at Federal and Masten streets and ground was broken for the foundation on March 17. The plans call for a structure costing about $50,000, consisting of three stories and basement. Club rooms and social features will be emphasized in the building.

Palmer Lands

Why go to Canada, or to Central Oregon, or anywhere else, when you can buy better land for less money and stay in Union County. Compare the following facts about Palmer Logged-off Lands with any other new lands. Let us explain more about these lands.

- PRICE—Only $15.00 per acre.
- TERMS—One-tenth down and one-tenth each year, interest 6 per cent.
- LOCATION—In Union County, 10 miles from Elgin, 30 miles from La Grande, 1 to 4 miles from Palmer Junction where there is a general merchandise store, postoffice, railway station on the O.-W. R. & N. with daily mail, passenger and freight service.
- ALTITUDE—2600 feet. (Lower than La Grande.)
- CLIMATE—Mild, no wind, 30 inches rainfall, no late frosts.
- SOIL—A mixture of volcanic and pine ash varying from 2 to 5 feet deep, with a clay sub soil that holds the moisture and keeps the soil damp all summer.
- CLEARING—Palmer lands were cut over several years ago; and the white pine stumps, having no tap root and being filled with pitch are easily burned or pulled.
- WATER—These lands are well watered from springs and living creeks, while good well water is found within a few feet of the surface. This is a dry farming country with plenty of rainfall.
- CROPS AND STOCK—A natural hay, grain, stock and dairy country. Cattle, sheep, hogs, horses and poultry have been raised with fine success. Vegetables, potatoes, berries and fruit are also grown with excellent results.
- WOOD—There is plenty of timber for building houses and barns on nearly every place and to furnish wood for many years. Some places have enough wood to pay for the land.
- SCHOOLS—There is a good school in the center of these lands which is to be increased to a nine months school.
- SETTLERS—About 2500 acres of these lands have already been sold and at least 20 families are now or will be living on their places this spring.

RUNAWAY JUNE

Ned Warner, riding aimlessly and disconsolately on a street car and looking out earnestly at every passerby, suddenly caught sight of one pedestrian who made his heart jump. Marie! She was jogging industriously along with a bundle under her arm and a very clear idea of direction apparent in her very speed. Ned ran after her. At the Boales door Marie heard the sound of running footsteps, turned with normal curiosity, saw Ned, let herself in at the door and closed it with a slam, snatched on the night lock and flew upstairs.

"He's coming, Miss June!" she cried. "Mr. Ned!" Ned! June's heart leaped within her, and for a moment she was flooded with a mad impulse to run down and be folded in his arms and forgiven. No! She must be strong for her own sake and for his, for the sake of their ultimate mutual self respect and the fullness of the love which can be founded on that alone.

"Meet me at that little hotel to which we were first going," she directed Marie hastily, and, snatching her hat and coat, she hurried down the stairs and out of the back door.

June had forgotten Gilbert Blye absolutely, but he had not forgotten her. He had been requested to wait, and Mrs. Boales, having correctly guessed that June wanted the invaluable Marie present at the interview, had been kind enough to inform Blye to that effect. Blye saw June in flight and followed her.

Mrs. Boales answered a violent knocking at the door to find herself confronted by the wild eyed Ned Warner.

"Where is my wife?" he demanded. "What's her name?"

"Warner, Mrs. Ned Warner!"

"No. There's a Mrs. Womple here, but she says her husband's dead, and a Mrs. Smith. Her husband gets home every Saturday night. And—say, what's her first name?"

"June. She's here! I saw her maid just come in! Marie! Where are they?"

"That's her!" Mrs. Boales was pleased. "Some calls her Moore and some Warner and some Justin, but her name's always June. There's a black whiskered man here to see her now. Name's Blye. He's in the parlor." And she craned in at the parlor door with scarcely a shift of her position.

June Hurried Down the Stairs.

"No, he ain't! Has he dared to go up to her room in my house?"

Ned burst past her and sprang up the stairs.

"First door to the right!" yelled Mrs. Boales.

Nothing happened. Ned burst in at the first door to the right. The room was empty!

Then up climbed Mayme Bates, the maid.

"If it's Miss Justin you're hunting," said Mayme, "I saw her and a black whiskered gentleman go out of the back door not more than three minutes ago!"

Ned Warner plunged down the stairs faster than he had gone up and slammed out of the back door, to find himself confronted by the endless universe! To the right or to the left? And when he reached the alley mouth, which way then? Right or left?

In the meantime the driven June, hurrying aimlessly, looked back at every turning to see if the man she loved were following her.

At each turning a dark figure, quicker than she, sprang into hiding behind tree trunk or gatepost or doorway or corner, selecting each hiding place before he left the last. And the figure was Gilbert Blye, black Vandyked, swaggering of gait and smiling.
