TOMORROW IS CIRCUS DAY

Miss Martha Florine, principal woman wild animal trainer of the Barnes circus. Miss Florine appears with a group of leopards, pumas and jaguars with the show that is to exhibit here tomorrow.

Tomorrow will be circus day—the big fun day of the year for young and old. The Barnes Wild Animal Circus will be in La Grande for two performances.

The Barnes circus is a show quite different from the ordinary old-time circus, for the reason that the entire entertainment presented is given by trained animals a troupe of wild and domestic animal-actors numbering over 600.

Instead of human acrobats, jugglers, tumblers and riders giving the entertainment, trained animals of nearly every known kind are cast as the performers. Elephants, camels, zebras, kangaroos, lions, tigers, leopards, bears, monkeys and all species of domestic animals appear as actors on the Barnes program.

It is hard to imagine more thrilling scenes than the big wild animal acts presented. Twenty-four, jungle-bred, full-grown, man-eating African lions are shown in one act, handled by one trainer. Young women trainers exhibit large groups of tigers, leopards and bears.

A profusion of acts of instructive and dignified quality are also shown. Fifty dogs, twenty goats, a large troupe of monkeys, baboons, chimpanzees and apes, zebras, camels, etc. appear in many amazing turns.

A feature of the Barnes shows and one to which the attention of the public is directed, are their horses and ponies. There are 550 of these animals, many of which are world's premium winners. Each one is a performer and no better educated horses are known to exist.

The fun part of the show has been well taken care of. Fifty funny elephants, dogs, ponies, monkeys, bears and mules, guarantee an almost continuous laugh.

The new feature, free parade is given at 10:30. Performance hours are 2 and 8 p. m., doors being opened one hour earlier.

MISSIONS DEBATED.

Home and Foreign Get Attention at League Sunday Debate.

A large group of Epworth Leaguers, a goodly number of the older members of the Methodist congregation, and a few visitors from other young people's societies listened with interest to the debate given before the Epworth League of the Methodist church last evening. The question for which A. N. Christenson gave the opening affirmative speech was, Resolved, that the present need for Home Missions is greater than that of Foreign Missions. After defining the meaning of the territory which should be included in the Home field he proceeded to show the great need for Christianizing America. While the negative for which Miss Jean Smith gave the opening address placed a slightly different definition on the meaning of the two fields, they rather emphasized the word "present" and proceeded to show the great needs of the foreign field. W. F. Ashman, the second speaker for the affirmative produced added evidence to show the need for missions and evangelization in America, after which Charles Bradley closed the debate for the negative.

with more evidence for the need of the foreign field. After a rebuttal speech by Mr. Christenson, the decisions of the judges was rendered in a double way. The three judges appointed for the debate, E. W. Kammerer, H. C. Vinacke, and Geo. H. Currey, gave a unanimous decision for the negative. Then the audience gave a decision for the same side in the form of a collection of the funds for which go to the two fields represented and the purpose of the debate, which was to better inform the Leaguers as to the needs of both fields, accomplished its object.
