La Grande Milling Co. Wins the Case. A lady calls the flour mill. "Come and get your old flour, it's streaked and don't look right." We rushed to the house, in a jitney, and found where she had mixed up a batch of biscuits after weeding the garden, picked a chicken and blackened her stove without giving her paddies a bath. Here's a case where the poor mill was not to blame. She kept the flour all right. 5-27-tf.

Mrs. Will French received good news today, which her many friends will rejoice to hear. She becomes the winner of a valuable piece of property which will be good news for Mr. French, on his arrival home. It seems that about 10 days ago Mrs. French entered into a contest with 200 other women, on a biscuit baking contest, and today was awarded a big sack of Blue Stem flour, for coming the closest to the correct answer. Out of a 49 sack of La Grande made Blue Stem flour she made 1176 biscuits, as per diagram in last week's Observer, coming within four biscuits of the correct answer. We wish to thank the ladies of La Grande and vicinity for the interest they are taking in using home made flour. Respectfully, La Grande Milling Co.—Adv. 5-27-tf.

WHERE STRAWBERRIES COME FROM.

Washington, D. C., May 26.—A recent survey of the production and marketing of strawberries in the United States, made by the Department of Agriculture, indicates that the eight most important commercial strawberry districts are Central California, Tennessee, Maryland, Delaware, Southern Louisiana, North and South Carolina, Virginia and the Ozarks. In 1914, 1,805 carloads of strawberries were shipped from Central California. Lesser quantities were shipped from the other districts which are named in the order of their importance. From the Ozarks came 748 carloads last year.

The authors of the survey, which is published in Bulletin 137 of the United States Department of Agriculture, "Strawberry Supply and Distribution in 1914," point out, however, that the North plays a more important part in the strawberry industry than these figures might indicate. Great quantities of berries are grown in the North in small patches and shipped to market by trolley, express or in the producer's own wagon. Only a very small portion of northern-grown berries are concentrated into carload lots, the basis for the Government survey. In the South, however, on the Pacific Coast, where berries are shipped long distances it is economical to arrange to have them sent by carloads.

The bulletin already mentioned contained a list of shipping stations in the United States where carload shipments originate, together with the number of carloads sent out in 1914. From this list it appears that there was a grand total of 14,532 carloads of strawberries shipped commercially in 1914. Of these 2,812 came from California, the State's closest competitor being Tennessee with a total of 1,571.5.

Another chart in the bulletin shows the duration of the shipping seasons in the various sections.
