HALF MILLION DOLLARS, NOT PRETTY GOWN WAS OBJECT

THE MAY BRIDESMAID'S GOWN OF REVENGE

New York, June 2.—Mr. dear Jean: I know this picture will give you a shock. I know you expected to see me in a gown, one ornamented with orange blossoms. But another wore that. I was only a bridesmaid.

Let me shock you again by telling you that I wore this at George Bronson's wedding.

When I wrote you some months ago that I was to be Mrs. Bronson I was very happy. I believed every word of it. I was sure George was in love with me. I am quite certain he is still in love with me, despite the fact that he is on his honeymoon with another.

My gown was a dream. It was made of albinthe gros de Londres. Albinthe, a rather sickly looking green in the piece, is a most beautiful shade when gracefully draped and combined with a harmonizing shade. The frock was puffed and showed a bouffant skirt, trimmed with creme lace. The sleeves were formed of the draped lace, and butterflies of tulle perched saucily on each shoulder.

With this I wore a leghorn hat, trimmed with pink roses, an ostrich plume, and veiled with layers of pink and green chiffon. The bouquet was of roses tied with an albinthe green ribbon, and the parasol of white warp print silk showed pink and green blossoms sprinkled over its surface.

Two months ago George, to whom I was engaged, though I did not make the announcement except to a few chosen friends like yourself, began to grow cold. I soon saw that something was the matter. I shall not tell you the whole story; but I demanded to know what was the matter, and after a scene, he told me he did not longer care for me and thought our marriage would be a mistake. He was certainly correct about that in the light of what has happened. But I could not see it then and took the affair much to heart.

Shortly afterwards I learned that he was paying attention to Pauline Brockton, whom I knew slightly. In time their engagement was announced. Thereupon, I began to cultivate her. You know, despite her money, she never knew how to dress. I wormed my way into her confidence until as the day of the wedding approached she asked me to become one of her bridesmaids. George could not object. To have done so would have required from him a confession that he had once been engaged to me.

At the wedding, and I say this not in a spirit of boastfulness, but of revenge, the eyes of the crowd were on me. I outshone the bride by far. She knew it. I could feel it, and I must confess it was one of the happy moments of my life. Yet she managed to control herself and go through the ceremony with a sort of pained expression.

"How on earth did he take Pauline in preference to Genevieve?" I heard a woman ask at the reception later.

"Genevieve didn't have a half million dollars," was the reply.

Yours,
Genevieve.

Today's Oddest Story

Fort Collins, Colo., June 1.—Old King Solomon and his famous decision on the baby claimed by two women as their child didn't have anything on the local police.

A chicken thief had visited nearly every roost in the city and his collection of fowls sorely puzzled the authorities to determine the rightful owners. Chickens look surprisingly alike and several victims of the thief claimed the same birds.

Some of the hens were taken to a point about a hundred yards from their supposed habitation. They were released.

After sizing up the landscape every hen made a straight dash for her own yard and fussed around the fence in an effort to get inside. This method was followed in a number of instances and proved satisfactory.
