How nice it is when a customer goes in your store and names over the list she wishes to purchase and the merchant finds on that list, goods made in La Grande. If Mr. Merchant believes in home factories and pay rolls, the first thing he will name that customer is the goods made here—if it is good and prices right. We don't only mean Bluestem, high patent flour, but we mean anything that is made in La Grande and if Mr. Merchant don't name home goods first you will soon have Mr. Customer sending away also as he may say that's the way Mr. Merchant taught me. We are all one big family here. We all depend on each other; we should—that's right. And should you find a grocer that can't name home flour on the first round, let us hear from you at once and we will tell you why. Two hundred and eighty-five barrels sold here in December. Nothing cheap about home flour, but the price.—Adv. 1-12-4t.

PRISON CAMPS VISITED.

By WILBUR S. FORREST

London, Jan. 2.—(By Mail)—Alexandra Palace, England's largest single interment camp for civilian prisoners of war, corresponding to Germany's Ruhleben, near Berlin, is the fascinatingly interesting British Military City I was permitted to visit today. No other press representatives were there; and this is the first time a press man has been permitted to enter this camp.

More than 3,000 enemy aliens, rich and poor from all parts of the world, are living at Alexandra Palace, north London. Hundreds of Croats and Poles from Pittsburgh and Detroit, captured on their way home to fight; well known European musical artists, interned while performing in England; Germans and Austrians taken from ships in the Atlantic and the North Sea and Austria-German directors of big British firms, together with alien inhabitants of England, some of thirty years' residence, make a unique and remarkable colony,—for the duration of the war.

There is no social distinction in the three battalions of a thousand men each. Military discipline prevails. It affects the English-German aristocrat and the lowest Pittsburg steel worker alike. A company of British soldiers guards the palace which in peace time served as a London Coney Island, or White City.

There are benevolent societies, directors' meetings, institutes of painting, drawing, sculpture; a theatre that would do credit to Broadway, workshops for dozens of trades, a fully equipped hospital; schools, postoffices, football and Swedish drill; laundries, mammoth spotless kitchens, stores and shops, commodious bath rooms and dozens of other things inside the barbed wire enclosing this multitude.

"They are making the best of it and it is my duty to let them enjoy life to the limit of military possibilities," remarked Colonel Froot Walker, a British regular army veteran of twenty years in the Orient, who is the commandant.

The Commandant's words voice the British attitude toward prisoners of war, both military and civilian. It considers the human side of those forced to live behind wire entanglements. Once a week the Commandant turns over his office to prisoners who have complaints. He hears the stories and does what he can. The man with a grouch tells his troubles to the captain of his mess. If it is meritorious, the complaint is passed to the alien commander who governs a hundred men. He takes it up with the battalion commander, another alien who governs a thousand men. Then the complaint may appear in person before the veteran commandant, who never "strafes" the enemy.

Twice weekly the commandant personally inspects every one of the 3,000 beds housed under the great roofs of the palace. These beds are neat and clean, with four blankets and a soft mattress for each.

There are eight cooks for every thousand prisoners. The food is prepared and taken to the three great mess rooms, each of which can compare in floor space to the main lobby of New York's Grand Central station. Here is the food allowance, per man per day: 1-2 pounds of white bread, 1-2 pound of meat; 1-2 pound of potatoes, two ounces of peas, lentils, beans or rice; two ounces of sugar; 1-2 ounce of tea or two ounces of coffee; one ounce of margarine or two ounces of cheese, tinned milk, salt and pepper. There is afternoon tea with bread and butter.

Each battalion has a large canteen where a prisoner may augment his food supply. The wealthier internees freely patronize the canteens, but the ordinary fare is better than the average Pittsburg steel worker ever had in his life. These Pittsburgers aren't anxious for the war to close. They're satisfied.

The American embassy, God-father of all enemy aliens in the British Isles, works hand in hand with a special committee of the wealthier interned men to care for the special wants of the poor. The women and children on the outside are the principal beneficiaries of this joint benevolent society. More than 3,000 cases have been attended to since September.

Almost every prisoner looks forward eagerly to the weekly theatre. Here artists, some high in the profession perform vaudeville stunts. Professional actors present the latest plays. The theatre will seat 1500 persons. The scenery was painted by artists who rank high in British and German art circles and is infinitely better than that found in the average London playhouse.

A smaller hall, for 500 persons is set aside for the evening musicals. This hall is always crowded. At tonight's concert Herr F. Lorant, an Austrian violinist who will be heard in America after the war, was the star attraction. His program, much applauded, was: Teufel's Trille, by Tartini; Nocturne, Chopin-Sarasat; Zephyr, Hubay; Ballad & Polonaise, Visuxtempa. An evergreen waltz was presented to Lorant by his admirers, the commandant doing the honor. Herr Lino Vesco, a Hungarian grand opera singer, rasped plaudits with Romanza aus Don Sebastiano by Donizetti. A piano solo, "Ballade As Dur" by A. Reschofsky, who studied under Paderewski, also was vociferously received.

Wonderful rose gardens surrounding the palace are kept by the aliens. In these gardens the married men receive visits from their wives or friends once a month, for fifteen minutes.

Special dispensation is granted to interned business men. Today a meeting of the directorate of a big British company, both British and German members attending, was going on in a room provided for the purpose. A British officer was listening. One of the German directors has lived in England for twenty years. He owns a mansion in London, a summer home at Margate, and has ten servants and an income that runs into six figures.

On Sunday there are church services for all creeds—Catholics, Lutheran, Jewish included; the latter for the scores of interned Polish and German Jews. Prisoners may write two letters each week. They smoke when they want to and do what they want to and there is no grumbling.

Coffee

If you had the time and knowledge, could pick from the world's coffee, and had the proper roasting and grinding facilities, you might roast your own coffee every morning before breakfast.
