

Coffee

It's easy to spoil good coffee in the grinding. If it's uneven, if there's chaff in it, it may be bitterish, muddy, lifeless.

Schilling's Best is first cracked and freed of bitterish chaff; then cut into even bits and the fine coffee-dust blown-out.

Of course, it must then be sealed at once in airtight tins—to hold-in all its rich, fine flavor for you.

Even grinding is economy—every bit helps flavor the cup.

FARM WEEK WILL PRODUCE EXPERTS

Goods Roads Among Things to Come Up During Big Week

PROF. HETZEL HERE.

Extension Director Hetzel, under whose general supervision the entire farm week program is, spent today in La Grande going over a multitude of details with Prof. Larsen, O. A. C. representative on the field, and Commercial club officials here. As the scope and field of the week is becoming clearer, the magnitude is being comprehended more fully, and the great mass of details now being shaped, not rapid strides toward perfection while Mr. Hetzel was here today.

"Brother Farmer what is your labor income?"

Some startling and disheartening facts were revealed in a recent Farm Management survey made in this state. Prof. Scudder, chief of agronomy, O. A. C., will discuss this subject Tuesday of Farmers' week. Prof. Powers, associate professor of irrigation and drainage has some water data which should be of value and interest to irrigators of this section.

Wednesday Professor Potter, chief of animal husbandry, O. A. C., will discuss what can we afford to pay for a range bull? The bull is half of your herd. How much can you pay?

Thursday, dairy specialists from the college and the United States department of agriculture will discuss problems of moment to the dairymen of Eastern Oregon. Prof. Helmer Rabild of the U. S. department will be one of the chief attractions.

Friday "Goods Roads" day Prof. Skelton, extension specialist of the college, will talk on road fundamentals, proper drainage, grades, etc. How many roads are built with the best intentions but with little attention to the fundamentals that go to make it permanent. Prof. J. T. Allen of the office of good roads, U. S. department of agriculture will address the meeting on proper construction of roads and their maintenance.

The climax for Saturday is the Farmers' organizations meeting. State heads of these organizations, J. D. Brown president of State Farmers' unions and C. E. Spence, master of State granges will be in attendance and give talks of interest and encouragement to local workers. Prof. Macpherson, student of international fame will present many features of interest on Rural organization and co-operation. He just recently returned from a Rural Credits conference in Chicago. Can you afford to miss any of these good things?

MONROE DOCTRINE MADE UP TO DATE

(By JOHN BARRETT.) (Director General, Pan-American Union, Washington, D. C.; Formerly United States Minister to Argentina, Panama and Columbia.)

I sometimes feel that all this discussion of the Monroe Doctrine is entirely in vain, that there is nobody who is an ultimate court upon the subject—nobody who can decide just what is its interpretation or its meaning or its significance. I know that I would not for a moment pretend that any views which I have upon the subject are final. I had at first decided I would not make any remarks, but I will briefly summarize some thoughts which I have been going over in my mind for many years in my association with Latin America. In my humble experience as a minister in three American republics and during the seven years that I have the honor of being the Director General of the Pan-American Union, I have striven earnestly to get what I call the Pan-American viewpoint of the Monroe Doctrine. Now I do not ask anyone to except what I say as final, but perhaps I look at this subject from a viewpoint a little different from that of many persons, because I have the rather unique position and experience of being the only Pan-American officer in America—not only one who is an officer of the United States but who is in every respect equally an officer of the other Latin-American countries.

Each day it is one of the duties of the members of my staff to lay before me the consensus of opinion of the newspapers of every important capital of the western hemisphere and therefore while I am actually in this country, I am able to follow closely the views of the peoples of other lands upon this subject under discussion.

As one who has been intimately associated, officially and privately, for nearly fourteen years with Latin America and Latin Americans, I may be permitted to make a few humble suggestions, which, if followed, might affect the permanent status of the Monroe Doctrine among the American nations, and might not!

I believe the time is coming when there may be evolved from the Monroe Doctrine itself as a principle and phrase, and thereupon substituted for the Monroe Doctrine as a principle of a "Pan-American policy." (These ideas, to some extent, I developed last fall at a meeting in Washington of the Society for Judicial Settlement of International Questions. What I am saying here is really a sublimated form of what I said at that time.) By that I mean a Pan-American policy acceptable to and approved by not only the United States, but all the American republics, a policy belonging to each and all on the same basis of attitude and action, protecting a like the sovereignty and governments of each—which is, after all, the delicate point—without the offensive suggestion of preponderance, dictation or domination of one nation like the United States. It is a common error among some of the statesmen and essayists of the United States, whenever they speak or write anything about the southern republics, to patronize them. This is a fatal error—always thus reminding them of the power and mightiness of the United States, as if the United States were both "papa and mamma," and they a group of little children playing in the back yard. Coupled with this are the equally common errors: First, that of not recognizing the extraordinary greatness and progress of some of the republics, even if others are not so progressive; and secondly, of classing them all as having revolutionary tendencies, in spite of the fact that two-thirds of Latin America, in area and population, has known no serious revolution whatever in the last twenty-five years.

This Pan-American policy would adopt, absorb and enlarge the Monroe Doctrine as an original policy of the United States into a greater and all-American policy, where each nation would have the same rights of attitude, the same dignity of position and the same sense of independence as the United States now has. By eliminating the attitude of absolute dictation and centralized power, which the Monroe Doctrine has been interpreted in Latin America as applying to the relations of the nations of the western hemisphere, by the substitution of "Pan-American" for "Monroe"—thus including all the American nations as sponsors—and by the substitution of "policy" for "doctrine" and thus removing the hard, unyielding, dictatorial and didactic suggestion of the words "Monroe Doctrine," about which every Latin American is a little sensitive, a long step will be taken towards a new era of Pan-American confidence.

It is not the Monroe Doctrine itself as a principle, but the interpretation—and mark my word—the interpretation thereof, as indicated in the recently published opinions of many prominent Latin Americans on this subject, that is not acceptable to the majority of Latin-American countries, and statesmen. This is a point that has been clearly overlooked by the critics of the Monroe Doctrine in the United States. If its haphazard interpretation can be supplanted with responsible and reasonable judgment, the majority of arguments against the doctrine in Latin America, and also in the United States, in describing it as obsolete will fall absolutely in their purpose and logic.

A distinguished Yale professor, for whom I have profound regard, leaving the safe fields of archaeological study, and venturing into the complex relations of international politics, calls the Monroe Doctrine an "obsolete shibboleth." How in the world any one man can assume to pass that judgment upon a great policy or doctrine, I cannot possibly understand. I fear that in his academic viewpoint he has exaggerated the importance which the Latin-American countries attach to the Monroe Doctrine, and he has attributed to that much assailed and suffering Doctrine all kinds of faults which are due to entirely other and different causes, such as North American ignorance and lack of appreciation of South America.

In conclusion, the Monroe Doctrine in its final analysis, in my opinion, and as I say, I do not for a minute state these things in a didactic way and my judgment may be entirely wrong, will continue to be a great international principle only to the degree that it is evolved into this greater Pan-American policy; and from a Doctrine of the United States alone into a policy of all the American republics, and now, if you follow me, though it is a little complicated, to the degree that it is evolved from being subjective on the part of the United States alone towards all the other American republics as objective, to being subjective on the part of each towards each and all the others as objective. That is, making each and every American republic feel that it is part of its policy towards each and every other American republic, instead of being just the policy of the United States alone towards all these other countries. To be still clearer in my idea I would say that I mean to evolve the Monroe Doctrine from being subjective on the part of the United States towards the other American republics in an objective position, to being subjective on the part of each and all towards in turn each and all as objective.

Then we will have achieved, in my opinion, that ideal, unselfish, fraternal relationship of the American governments and peoples which will give a new worth and a permanent, acceptable significance to Pan-American relationship, Pan-American accord, and the status of the Pan-American Union.

Can't Pass Brain Test

Cleveland O., Jan. 19.—Although most of the city officials and 6 or 7 school board members failed to pass the Binet normal mentality test now officially used on all Cleveland school children, a majority of the insane patients at Newburg state hospital passed the test easily.

Clevelanders opposed to the Binet test cited these facts today in their fight to have the test abolished. The test is part of a system of examination under which 1647 school children have been declared mentally defective. A child of 12, to be normal according to the Binet test, must after hearing it once, repeat: "I saw in the street a pretty little dog. He had curly brown hair, short legs and a long tail."

RELIEVES THE WORST CASES OF CATARRH

Think "Hyomei the Most Wonderful Treatment for Catarrh Ever Discovered."

Do not try to cure catarrh by using sprays or lotions; it cannot be cured in that manner. The only way in which in this too common disease can be fully relieved is through a direct application to the affected parts that will kill the bacilli of catarrh and prevent their growth.

Breathing the air of Hyomei is the only known method of treatment that can really accomplish this. It is the simplest, most pleasant and probably the most reliable treatment for catarrh that has ever been discovered. The complete Hyomei outfit is inexpensive and consists of an inhaler, dropper and sufficient Hyomei to last several weeks. This will effect instant relief in ordinary cases, but for chronic and deep-seated cases of catarrh, longer use may be necessary, and then an extra bottle of Hyomei can be obtained for a trifling sum. It is not alone the best (it might be only) method of treating catarrh, but it is also the most economical.

The La Grande Pharmacy has so much confidence in the power of Hyomei to relieve catarrh, that they will for a limited time, sell this medicine under their personal guarantee to refund the money if the purchaser can say that it did not benefit.—Adv
