"If the amount of air entering the carburetor is not sufficient to insure complete combustion, we have what is known as a rich mixture," says a bulletin on carbon deposit and its causes, issued by the Standard Oil company. "This is a slow-burning mixture rather than an explosive one and will cause excessive carbon deposit.

"For example, if the wick of an oil burning lamp is turned too high, too much oil will be siphoned through the wick for the amount of air entering the lamp to form complete combustion. The lamp will smoke, and soot, which is carbon, will be deposited on the chimney.

"This is exactly what happens in the cylinders of a gas engine. The products of incomplete combustion of the gasoline deposit a certain amount of carbon in the combustion chamber. This carbon deposit will build up very much more quickly if it has a bed to build up on, such as would be produced by a lubricating oil which when exposed to the heat of explosion would leave a gummy deposit.

"Lieut. G. S. Bryan, U. S. N., has ably and correctly pointed out in his article on "Motor Cylinder Lubrication" that lubricating oils manufactured from Paraffine Base crudes deposit more carbon than lubricating oils manufactured from Asphaltic Base Crudes. The reason for this is that Paraffine Base crudes contain paraffine wax which cannot be entirely eliminated from the manufactured product."

One hundred thousand automobiles of the familiar standard type will be the output of the Maxwell Motor company's big factories during the next year, according to announcement received by Bob Leighton, local Maxwell dealer, from Detroit yesterday.

The expansion of the Maxwell company, under its present policy of producing but a single chassis, has been remarkable, even in this day of rapid motor car development. But a little over two years ago the first of the familiar "25" types made its appearance. Since then the production has more than doubled itself each season, until now 100,000 cars are necessary to fill the natural demand.

In order to keep up with the production, extensive rebuilding of the immense factories at Detroit and Newcastle, Indiana, where the parts department is located, has been under way for some time. The capacity of the huge plants is now capable of double the output of last year, and advance specifications indicate that they will be run at full speed for the entire coming year.

Pendleton, Jan. 20.—Earl Snyder, popular Pendleton high school youth and one of the best amateur boxers that this city has seen, last evening easily outpointed Steve Lichter of Ellensburg in a scheduled six round main event at a smoker given by the Moose in their hall. The bout only went three rounds and a half, the referee stopping it and holding Snyder's hand aloft in token of victory. Snyder had Lichter in a bad way in the third, sending him to his knees with a stiff left to the jaw. In the opening round the Ellensburg youth, who is rangy, dashed at the Pendleton boy like a battle charger, but, though he took several windmill swings at him, couldn't connect. Snyder laid back and let his opponent do the dancing around though he did slip across a couple of left body punches. Toward the end of the second Snyder connected with Lichter's nose and slowed the latter up perceptibly. Early in the third another blow to the nose started the claret freely and the punch to the jaw sent Lichter to his knees. The fourth had hardly begun before Snyder landed another stiff left and then uncorked a right, the two sending the other to the floor again. He was not out and wanted to continue but he was so apparently outclassed that the good of the sport demanded that the bout be stopped. The bout between Edie Williams and Bob Gray, 159 pounds, ended almost before it began. It started lively but Gray, claiming that he had received a blow in foul territory but blaming himself for it, suddenly doubled up and left the ring.

The opener was a four round go between flyweights, Kid Dozier, the scientific Pendleton juvenile, and Young Koppe of Los Angeles. No decision was given but Dozier, who was a little the heavier and a better boxer, had the better of it. However, Koppe was game and gave Dozier a better go than most of his opponents.

The evening's entertainment was enlivened by two cockfights between game roosters owned by John Dyer and Tommy Smart. The spurs of the cocks were muffled so that no harm could be done. In the first bout Dyer's white rooster had the better of the go and in the final one Smart's veteran scrapper had the edge on the other rooster.

FASHION NOTES.

By MARGARET MASON. (Written for the United Press.) The owner of the fashion shop is very low with grippe. The cashier has bronchitis. The buyer has a nip. Of plain old influenza, while the salesgirl has the pip. The model's mighty busy with a very active nose.

And yet the widow's full of hats Of straw, and Springtime clothes. New York, Jan. 21.—You stand with your feet in the slush and snow and gaze at the flowery array of straw bonnets and cotton frocks in the gayly trimmed shop windows. You can almost smell the violets and the budding leaves and between sneezes you murmur hoarsely: "Spring is almost here." But alas! Spring is far distant and the misleading shop windows only show the spirit of preparedness on the part of the shop keepers. It is true that you glimpse a straw hat occasionally on an early head, but one straw doesn't make a springtime any more than one swallow makes a drink. The recent motor show called out many spring modes. One stunning model was done as to body, in a smart serge suit of castor hue. A distinctly new top of absinthe green bamboo straw graced her head in the form of a cloche turban appetizingly encircled with one apple, one lemon, one orange and a bunch of pearl grapes. Castor, by the way, is the newest color for spring. It vies with the suits of white serge for Southern wear and tops the new spring boots in chic rivalry with white. Pink and blue in combination is another favored spring color scheme that has crept from under the surface popularity as lingerie tints, to surface wear in frocks and hats. Lovely muslins and cotton materials for one piece frocks are barred in pink or blue sprigged in either forgetme-pots or rosebuds, distractingly. Gather ye roses while ye may and tuck 'em and ruffle 'em and smock 'em too and the result will be a duck of a dress, as quaint as an old fashioned picture. For we are still to be old fashioned this spring to be new fashioned in mid-Victorian manner. The spring hats continue to climb skyward even as their winter kin and high crowns and lofty arrangements of wings, bows and flowers distinguish them. Taffeta is a close rival of straw as a hat material and quaint little bonnet shaped or coche hats of taffeta are trimmed in old fashioned ruffles of the same. Taffeta hats faced in straw and straw hats faced in taffeta add variety; and two colored straws woven in check design in plain sailors of snug turban shapes are beginning a checkered career in these bleak months of wind and snow on which not even a checked straw hat can put a check.
