POE REINCARNATED SEEN IN ESSANAY'S MASTERPIECE "THE RAVEN"

"And the raven, never fitting, still is sitting, still is sitting. On the pallid bust of Pallas, just above my chamber door; And his eyes have all the seeming of a demon's that is dreaming And the lamp-light o'er him streaming throws his shadow on the floor,

And my soul from out that shadow that lies floating on the floor Shall be lifted nevermore!"

—From "The Raven," by Edgar Allan Poe

Thus Edgar Allan Poe, back in the early days of the last century, wrote and, in the end, gave to the world a poem which since has won for him recognition as America's greatest poet.

"The Raven" is the title of the poem, and it is typical of that famous poet—a melancholy, weird collection of verses which truly indicates his moody and gloomy temperament. It is an epitome of Poe's life—a tragedy from beginning to end—and it reveals clearly the undying affection which he had for his lost wife.

Today, almost a century since Poe wrote his remarkable poem, Essanay has succeeded in accomplishing the difficult task of reincarnating Poe.

Essanay has found Poe's parallel and his double, in looks as well as temperament, in the person of his leading actor, Henry B. Walthall.

For photographic effects, illusions, richness and artistry of settings, "The Raven" is without parallel.

of water appears to Poe as a skeleton, and Poe fights a duel with himself. These are only a few of the illusions.

A duplicate of Poe's cottage in Fordham, near New York, was put up in Essanay's Chicago studio grounds, and a raven was obtained from the northlands of Canada to provide the necessary realism to the film version of the poem. A model of a boat several hundred years old was purchased for a large sum, just to make the landing of Poe's ancestors as true to life as possible.

"The Raven," which challenges description in mere words, will be at the Arcade, tonight and tomorrow.

A Comment on "Damaged Goods"

Coming to Sherry's, Watch for Date. Spokane, Wash. Gamage Goods booked to the Class a theatre, leading theatre. James Emmet Royce, dramatic reviewer, writes:

"Damaged Goods is a splendid product of the camera. Undoubtedly the production accomplishes its purpose. The punch carried in its seven reels is unmistakable."

"Rosemary," a beautiful and charming five part feature picture in which Marguerite Snow, known throughout filmland as "Pretty Peggy," is starred, will be shown at Sherry's today only.

"Rosemary" is a picturization of the successful stage play of the same name in which John Drew appeared at the Empire Theatre in New York. It affords Miss Snow ample opportunity to display her distinctive talents, and the role carries her through a series of intensely interesting situations. Mr. Gilmore is equally well fitted to his part, a role he played with great success on the speaking stage. All the scenes are laid in a quaint English countryside, and the atmosphere is maintained in a masterly manner.
