Humorous and Sarcastic

The charge that the American is no longer interested in politics is refuted by the fact that thirteen men have been indicted in Charleston.—Minneapolis Journal.

A Harvard man has invented a machine for detecting liars but nature beat him to it when she invented women.—Macon News.

"Is eating candy a cause for crime?" asks a scientist. Well, all of us remember what Doc Cook did after filling himself full of gumdrops.—Brookfield, Mo. Gazette.

The "dam" was the smallest and least valued Persian coin in the ancient days. Which is a thing nobody cares for a—small Persian coin about.—Indianapolis News.

The trouble with Villa is that he has for some time been laboring under the impression that it was easy and safe to murder Americans as it was for him to take a new wife.—Chicago Herald.

Call a thing a "cause" and you get some person to do hard work for it without pay, however, unless it may be. On the other hand there are workers for a "cause" who would quit if their salaries were stopped.—Albany Journal.

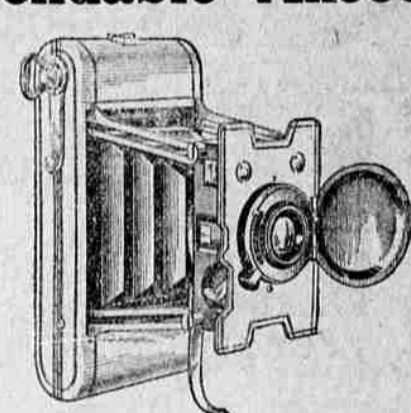

A Wisconsin scientist says cannibalism is logical, as human flesh is the most digestible. Still, we all know of some people we are certain would not agree with us under any conditions.—Indianapolis Star.
