Vivian Martin in "Merely Mary Ann."

Vivian Martin, Broadway favorite, who is starred in the William Fox production, "Merely Mary Ann," entered a New York department store to do some Christmas shopping. She made purchases which totaled in the vicinity of $200. As she was about to pay for the articles, she discovered that she had left her purse in her apartment.

"You will please charge these," said Miss Martin to the clerk. "I have an account here."

"And the name, please?" queried the clerk. "Merely Mary Ann." A few seconds later a sleek, well-groomed individual presented himself before Miss Martin.

"Pardon me," said he; "I am the credit man and I find no record of your account. Will you give me the name again, please."

"Merely Mary Ann," was the non-chalant answer. "And you expect me to charge $200 worth of goods merely to Mary Ann?" "You have always been willing to before."

"Well, take it from me," said the credit man, convinced that the woman before him was a store sharp; "right here and now is where we tie the can to Mary Ann."

"Mary Ann? Did I say 'Mary Ann?'" A hundred thousand pardons!" And then she explained who she was. Her real name and face were recognized immediately and the charge was made with alacrity.

"That was the most humiliating experience that I ever had in my life," said Miss Martin, in telling the incident to a friend. "It serves me right, though, for becoming so wrapped up in a part. All I can think, talk or write about is Mary Ann, since work was begun on 'Merely Mary Ann' in which I am starred."

Old Indians Pacifists.

New York, N. Y., April 18.—The wife's mother must never come face to face with her son-in-law, and both must use every honorable means to avoid meeting at any place after the marriage has taken place, according to the law of the Blackfeet Indians, Sergeant William Dubey, an old Indian fighter of the United States Marine Corps, now retired, told comrades of the George F. Elliott Camp of the Spanish War Veterans, at a meeting last night.

"Any yet the plain Indian is pointed out as a horrible example of savagery," Dubey went on. "No, sir, the Blackfoot is the original pacifist, and the mother-in-law custom proves it." Sergeant Dubey, United States Marine Corps, retired, admits that he has himself been married three times.
