AT THE MOVIES

SCENE FROM "THE BLINDNESS OF LOVE"

AT SHERRY'S

Tomorrow Only.

Julius Steger, the eminent dramatic star, will be seen on the screen here at the Sherry theatre tomorrow (Sunday) only in "The Blindness of Love," a strong Metro wonderplay in five acts. The story of this feature is in keeping with the type that have made Mr. Steger famous as a supreme artist of pathos and tenderness. He essays the role of an itinerant piano tuner, after his fortune has been swept away through the profligacy of a son, to whom he is blindly devoted. Mr. Steger is supported by an unusually strong cast in which George Le Gaero, the noted juvenile actor, and Grace Valentine, an artist of rare ability, are featured. "The Blindness of Love" promises to be one of the distinct novelties of the season.

AT ARCADE

The Sable Lorcha.

Around Chinatown and the mysterious and subtle methods of Chinese revenge runs the plot of "The Sable Lorcha" which is the Triangle offering at the Arcade Sunday. Tully Marshall depicts all the cunning and malice inherent in Chinese character as John Soy. Thomas Jefferson as Donald McNish, originally Donald Cameron, had blown up a Chinese yacht or lorcha, destroying a hundred yellow men from whom he had gained passage money for America. Two partners of McNish escape, being Soy and an Irish adventurer, Murphy. Though failing in several attempts to gain revenge by killing McNish, the pair continue in their purpose and enlist in their aid one of the powerful secret societies in Chinatown. Murphy mistakes Robert Cameron, a wealthy and respected brother of Donald, for the latter. After several mysterious warnings Robert Cameron takes refuge on his yacht with his daughter's lover. Cameron is kidnapped and Clyde, the lover, goes to Chinatown seeking for clues. McNish is set upon by two Chinamen in front of Robert Cameron's Fifth avenue house and is taken into the home of his brother. Cameron is finally rescued by Clyde with the aid of the police from the basement where he had been chained to the wall while the place was gradually being flooded with water.

"His Father's Footsteps"

There are some comic surprises in store for you when you see Ford Sterling in "His Father's Footsteps" Sunday at the Arcade. As the story begins, the parents are fearful that their son will be led astray by the young lady next door. As a stern parent, Sterling goes into the room prepared to rebuke the girl. Instead of that he is induced to go with her to a cafe. She notifies the son of the escapade and the mother finds out about the affair. There is some lively dancing by the father and the girl, when the wife appears on the scene. Later there is a lively fight between the landlord and the father, and the latter is thrown out of the tenth story window, but is saved by catching his clothing on a hook during the descent. The building is set on fire by an overturned lamp during the struggle. Firemen come on the scene and help put out the fire but the girl climbs a ladder and rescues the father by cutting his clothes loose from the hook with an axe. He is dragged out of a water barrel, drenched and disheveled. The girl and youth achieve happiness and the parents are reconciled.

NOTES FROM FILMDOM

President Wilson visited a movie last week where a picture of himself was being shown. He remarked that he wanted to see himself as others see him.

Marguerite Clark in Molly Make-believe is scoring a big hit in Portland.

Metro are now releasing comedies starring Sidney Drew.

Robert Leonard and Ella Hall of Master Key fame will be seen shortly in The Crippled Hand, a Blue Bird Feature.

The acting of little Rita Connolly as the child Audrey in the Frohman-Paramount picture, contains one superb bit of child-psychology, so humanly appealing that it reaches all the way down to the depths of the spectator's nature. We refer to her adorably natural playing with the fringe on her rescuer's jacket even though she was crying all the while as if her little heart was breaking. That fifty feet of film is worth a whole chapter in any text-book.

Do You Look Like a Screen Star? Minneapolis, Minn.—The Minneapolis "Tribune" has started a stunt for its Sunday picture page which should arouse plenty of interest among residents of the city who are thirty-third degree film fans. It is offering to print on its Sunday page the picture of any girl whose friends insist she looks enough like some screen star to be her sister. The first week brought in its quota of pictures, the editor of the page says.

Florence La Badie has sent to Arthur Wadeham, of Canton, a gift of a cameo scarf pin. The Thanhouser star sends one to every hundredth man who proposes marriage to her and Wadeham is the fourth man to get it. They say that the gift of a pin breaks friendship.

Chaplin Comes High But Worth It (Seattle Star, April 17.)

If you wonder why they're paying Charlie Chaplin a salary of $670,000 a year to be funny before the camera, and why John Hamrick, manager of the Rex, had to bid $2,500 to get the new Chaplin burlesque, just released, drop into the Rex and look it over.

If Charlie, as Darn Hosiery doesn't get a laugh out of you, why, there's something wrong, that's all, and you ought to see a doctor.

If you saw Geraldine Farrar's or Theda Bara's rendition of "Carmen," you'll scream when you see Charlie's. The famous opera is staged and costumed in correct style. Chaplin introduces the humor. Everything seems at one moment to be going just as nice, well-behaved opera should go.

Then, in the next, Charlie has you punching the stranger next to you in the ribs in your merriment.

Since it became known that Mary Pickford wore corduroy trousers in many scenes of the seven-reel Famous Players-Paramount picture, "Poor Little Peppina," she has received requests from three Italian mothers who wanted to know whether or not she would give them the trousers for their small sons who would soon be big enough to wear them. Not being able to discover any way of dividing the trousers in three equal portions, Miss Pickford decided to preserve strict neutrality by keeping them in her extensive wardrobe.
