MARRIN FOUND TO BE GUILTY

PENDLETON MURDER AVENGED IN VERDICT. Drunken Brawl Witnessed by Dee Matlock Described in Court.

Pendleton, May 23.—William C. Marrin, known here as Whitey Marrin, was found guilty this afternoon, after but a few hours deliberation by a jury in the Circuit court, of manslaughter. He was charged in an indictment returned by the grand jury, with second degree murder. His victim was Wendell C. Phillips, a young man who came here from Spokane. During a scuffle in the room of Marrin, Phillips was shot in the groin and died at the hospital three days later.

The state took the position that Marrin took the gun, a combination pistol and rifle, from a drawer in his bureau, pointed it at Phillips's neck, that Phillips pushed it down so that the bullet entered the groin instead of his head, and that the weapon was discharged by Marrin.

The defense offered testimony to the effect that the weapon was discharged during a scuffle in which Phillips was the aggressor. Dee Matlock, who was the only other person present at the time of the shooting, testified that Phillips hit him on the head with some hard object and that when he straightened up he saw Phillips and Marrin in a struggle for the possession of the weapon with which Phillips was killed.

Sentence will be pronounced Friday, Judge Phelps announced. The penalty is from 1 to 15 years in the state prison.

FRANCIS ASBURY—THE BISHOP

(By Bishop Bristol in Chistain Advocate)

An hundred wonderful years have passed since Bishop Asbury closed his apostolic labors. Through that stirring century of the genius and spirit of the greatest itinerant bishop of all time has been felt with an inspiring power in the mighty evangelistic movement which has characterized the religious awakening and progress of the modern world. The close of the eighteenth and opening of the nineteenth century were characterized by the appearance of four tremendous history-making forces—the Declaration of Independence, the steam engine, applied electricity, and Methodism. No philosophy of American history can be adequate that fails to recognize the political, economic, scientific, and spiritual forces as the most potent factor in our national development. What Washington was to the Revolution, what Watt or Fulton was to the steam motor and what Franklin was to the application of electricity that was Francis Asbury to the evangelistic movement which has culminated in a world-wide Methodism.

England's most valuable contribution to the new world was Francis Asbury. Nor do we forget that there were giants in those days—the days of Washington, Napoleon and Wellington, the days of Chatham, Fox and Burke, the days of Wesley, Fletcher and Coke, the days of the singers of the Declaration of Independence and of the framers of the Constitution of the United States, the days of the heroes of Concord and Bunker Hill, of Saratoga, and Yorktown, of Trafalgar and Waterloo. And yet Francis Asbury stood among the great of that great time to be seen by all the future as second to none in helping to shape the very destiny of Christendom. If the rise and development of Methodism in England and America have contributed as largely to the progress of Anglo-Saxon civilization as the most authoritative historians would have us believe then Francis Asbury will stand beside the tallest in the temple of enduring fame.

Promise of Great Leadership

It is sufficient in our estimate of the character and abilities of Asbury to be assured that John Wesley, that astute ecclesiastical statesman, found in him the promise of the superb and consecrated leadership which was to blaze a way through the frontiers of the world for the triumphant advance of Methodism and of every form of evangelical and evangelistic Christianity. At the age of 26 and the year of his arrival in this country he was appointed by Mr. Wesley as his assistant in the American work. This position was what might be called a lay episcopacy. Mr. Wesley, himself, exercised all the functions of a bishop and was that, except in name. As his assistant, and after Rankin's return from England as his general assistant, Asbury, in the language of Bishop Coke and of Asbury himself, "for many years before exercised every branch of the Episcopal office excepting that of ordination." The question was asked in the conference of 1779: "Ought not Brother Asbury to act as general assistant in America?" The answer was, "He ought."

In a sense, therefore, Asbury was the first bishop of American Methodism. So abundant were his labors in this office of what may be called assistant bishop, so profound was his piety, so absolutely self-sacrificing was his ministry of toil and suffering, so strict and yet eminently just were his discipline and administration, so evangelistic were his methods of religious propaganda, and so manifestly superlative was his genius for leadership, that when Mr. Wesley appointed him joint superintendent with Bishop Coke over our brethren in North America, he was with Dr. Coke received by a vote of the First General Conference, and that unanimously.

Pontiac Asylum by Judge Hulbert recently in the Probate Court. The "incessant use of the cigarettes" was declared by Dr. S. L. Layton, who examined Winters, to have affected his mind. Frequenting a saloon, Winters smoked until his supply gave out and his money too. After that he begged smokes from the customers of the saloon, according to Jos. Berman, the proprietor of the place. Winters petitioned the court to have Berman taken to an asylum. A German by birth, Winters was getting along well in this country until the cigarette habit got the upper hand. Given jobs by Berman, Winters even lost his power of application to simple work. "No more work for me," he would say, as he would sit down on the job, Berman told investigators. The nicotine undoubtedly had a deteriorating effect on his mentality, Dr. Layton declared. Exhibits Draw Attention. The exhibits prepared by the Ethical Culture School, which have been displayed at the celebration of the fortieth anniversary of the movement in American, attracted widespread attention among those interested in progressive educational movements very largely owing to the fact that the New York school has set the pace in kindergarten and annual training for the public schools and many other institutions of learning. The Ethical Culture Schools in New York is the pioneer in introducing manual training as an integral and elementary education with reference to its special and industrial uses, and for the generous educational advantages to be derived from it. Industrial education represents industrial training to students of all ages, differing from the earlier systems since it regards manual training as a prevocational subject supplying the scheme of general educational interest into industrial activities and insight. Another feature of the schools is the wide use of the festivals, which are widely used in other countries, and they are promoted on the principle that they should be a part of every child's life, and arranged by the children themselves, with as little help as possible from grown-ups. NEW AMUSEMENT IS FOUND Chicago, May 1.—Excessive geniality caused W. H. Guthrie, 733 East Forty-seventh street, a clerk, to land in Central Station the other night. Mr. Guthrie, being excessively jovial, pulled a trolley off its wire at State and Adams streets. The conductor chased him, but Mr. Guthrie eluded pursuit. Then he pulled off another trolley and still another. This time a mounted policeman pursued and caught the jovial Mr. Guthrie. Real York has had a May party of real importance, Twenty-five acres of Central Park, known as the sheep-meadow, was roped off for the benefit of the girls' branch of the Public School Athletic League, one day during the week, and nine thousand little girls from sections of the city where grass does not grow overplentifully, gathered on the green and spent the day in a real Mayday party. There were folk dances, most of them English, in honor of the Shakespeare tercentenary.
