HILL'S DEPARTMENT STORE

AT THE MOVIES

AT ARCADE

New York Department Store Forms Setting for Hazel Dawn Film.

For the department store scenes in her next Famous Players-Paramount production, "The Saleslady," Hazel Dawn actually spent many hours behind the ribbon counter in one of the most celebrated department stores in New York. Over three hundred employees of the establishment and the entire store were placed at the disposal of the star and her director, Frederick Thomson, in the making of this unusual drama which is the attraction at the Arcade for Monday and Tuesday.

The story itself differs radically from anything in which Miss Dawn has ever appeared on the screen, embodying real pathos as well as comedy. It is the tale of a country girl whom poverty forces to try her fortune in New York.

The fact that this is the first great metropolitan department store to be reproduced upon the screen lends particular interest to this story. The entire building, which comprises the department store in question, was placed at the disposal of the Famous Players for the taking of the scenes in the store. Great quantities of powerful lights were transported from the studio to the store in order to permit the producers to get a comprehensive sweep of the broad expanse of the interior.

The fact that this celebrated department store forms the actual background for a large portion of the film will be of especial interest to every Paramount exhibitor because there is scarcely a village or hamlet in the country where the setting will not be recognized by some.

THE WAR IN EUROPE

La Grande Brought Close to Ruins of the Great War in Europe

The vivid story of how the principal cities of Belgium were destroyed during the early part of the great European conflict when the first stages of the war developed and the Germans were on their victorious advance into that country, is told in the "Grand Review of the War in Europe" moving pictures which this city has been successful in contracting for with the Williams Feature Film Company. These pictures have created a sensation wherever they have been shown. To the audience they bring the terrible conflict, half the nations of the world are involved in, close to home.

Braving the danger of flying shells and bullets, a staff photographer of the Chicago Tribune was sent to Europe when the war broke out to photograph the early stages of the conflict. He risked death many times, but his reward was the collection of a moving picture film which has never been duplicated. It tells the story of the war as nothing else can. The camera does not lie. Before he had completed his task, 10,000 feet of film had been safely cranked and preserved to be shown in this country.

These pictures show how the principal cities of Belgium appeared prior to the advent of the German armies. Later, while the Germans were passing through or bombarding these cities and after the armies had advanced, they were rephotographed. The result was an astounding comparison. Burning buildings, bursting German shells, devastation on all sides is shown. Masses of troops are seen in action. No less than 6,000 feet of the film was made directly on the firing line. They show the Belgian and German troops actually in action. These pictures were taken near the German trenches and that portion of the film has been called the "German side of the war."

It takes two and one-half hours to show the pictures, which in itself gives some idea of the amount of film actually taken and the fact that it is in store for those who attend. Special music is provided for the program. The audience is held spell-bound by the reproduction of the most fascinating scenes. This is not a manufactured play. There is nothing artificial about it, nor mimic. It is a story of real, saddest and terrible life and death, action and courage—actual scenes of the greatest war in the history of the world.

The program is divided into two parts, an intermission of five minutes having been arranged after the first part. This is done for the convenience of the audience and to prevent interruption after the second half of the program opens by people rising and leaving.

Squirrel Gets Revenge

Chicago, May 26.—The squirrel in Edward Schultz' back yard was more arrogant than ever Sunday.

Policemen had spent Saturday afternoon shooting at him. Although they didn't come anywhere near hitting him, he became resentful and was cut bright and early looking for revenge.

In the afternoon Mr. Schultz' Chinese chow dog, Princess—the cause of the hostility toward Mr. Squirrel—appeared in the back yard. The squirrel tried to follow her inside and gentlemanly animal that he is, he bit Princess in the ear, then proceeded to berate her.

Of course, Princess ran for the house. Mr. Schultz heard her yelping and opened the back door. The squirrel tried to follow her inside and when he was unsuccessful climbed up on the screen door. His chattering became more bitter than ever and he refused to leave until Mr. Schultz got after him with a broom.

Mr. Schultz insists the squirrel is jealous of the attention the dog receives. He admits, however, that the animal is discreet, for although he is not afraid of chow dogs and policemen with revolvers, he is more respectful to a bulldog that occasionally visits the Schultz yard.

3 Die Many Hurt in Storm

Philadelphia, May 26.—Three lives were lost, many persons were injured and much property damaged in a severe electrical and hail storm that swept over Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey late today.

Marie Wheaton, 16 years old; Florence Smith, 18, and Louis White, 23; were crushed to death in the ruins of an ancient stone barn, where they had sought refuge during the storm. A bolt of lightning struck the building, located on the outskirts of the city and which was erected before the Revolutionary War. Another bolt set a building afire and injured four persons, two seriously.

In Philadelphia the storm was accompanied by a tremendous downpour of rain, and in some sections by a tornado-like wind, which blew down signs and trees.

Rich Man's Son Is Suing

Denver, Colo., May 26.—John Curr, Jr., son of a wealthy business man of Colorado Springs, filed an action for divorce there the other day against Geraldine Garrison-Curr, daughter of Judge Charles Grant Garrison, of the New Jersey Supreme Court, and a niece of former Secretary of War Garrison. He charges desertion and asks for the custody of their children.

The couple resided in Colorado Springs several years ago and were prominent socially. They removed to New York five years ago, where they became associated with prominent society people, and were members of a fashionable colony at Douglaston, Long Island.

Two years ago Mrs. Curr caused her husband's arrest on a charge of non-support. New York dispatches then stated that she and her three children were living in a cheap two-room tenement, while he was receiving a monthly allowance of $200. The case was settled, it is said, when he agreed to give her a small allowance, and later they resumed their marital relations.

Last fall, it is said, when Mr. Curr went to join his family at a Summer resort near New York, he was informed that they had left for Merchantville, N. J., the home of Mrs. Curr's father. Their friends state that Curr afterward made several futile attempts toward reconciliation and finally decided to return to Colorado and ask for a divorce.

An action was filed here February 30, but a new divorce law required the filing of the case at the plaintiff's former residence. D. Edgar Wilson, attorney for Mrs. Curr, says he will file an answer in her behalf.

Ships Eggs to England

Evans, Or., May 25.—A Eugene man has found a market for eggs in England and says he actually makes a profit of several dollars a case. W. W. Eibetz, of 208 High street and an operator of the Bush Box & Crate company, which makes a specialty of a parcel post egg crate, a few days ago received returns on a shipment of 12 dozen eggs which he shipped on April 5 to Ramate, England. The sum was $2.32 above all expenses of shipment and packing.
