

Effective Insect Powder

Insect powder isn't always effective. Insect powder loses its killing power by age. If made from full-blown flowers it hasn't the strength of that made from the half-blown buds. The latter kind freshly ground, is what we insist upon having for our trade. A fresh lot has just arrived. If you need insect powder, let us supply you. Costs just the same as you pay for the common kind

CARNIVAL HERE ALL THIS WEEK

The Bauscher Big United Show arrived yesterday from Pendleton. They are erecting their attractions on Jefferson avenue. Chief among their attraction is a $10,000.00 merry-go-round, and a giant new Ferris wheel 60 feet in height. Among their shows is foremost the Animal show, a rare exhibit of strange and various specimens of the jungles and the forests. The trained deer show is the only one of its kind in the world. Everything is clean and legitimate. The shows and concessions will open tonight and stay in La Grande all this week. The show comes highly recommended from other places and their stay here should prove very satisfactory.—Adv. 5-29-16.

THREE ARE BOUND OVER

DEFENSE PROCEEDS WITH ITS CASE. Two of the Trio Have Given Bonds—Non-Suit Denied.

After denying a motion for a suit in the state case against Ralph Henline, Troy Welper and Mrs. Henline Saturday afternoon Justice of the Peace Williams ordered the preliminary hearing to proceed, and the defense proceeded with its evidence. The chief object sought by the defense was to establish the fact that Mrs. Henline had no connection with the kidnapping affair with which the three are charged, and that in the wording of the law "enticing away and hiding" must be jointly proven. The trio were bound over to the grand jury late in the evening, the two men on $500 each and Mrs. Henline at $250.00. All save Mr. Welper are out on bonds today. ### REPUBLICANS ARE ORGANIZED

HARMONIOUS FEELING AT TENDS MEETING OF 30 MEMBERS.

J. H. Peare Elected Chairman for Fourth Consecutive Term—Committees Named.

Full accord one with the other, and harmonious throughout, the Republican Central committeemen met in La Grande late Saturday afternoon and formed a permanent organization. While no resolutions were passed, the sense of the meeting was that the committee support the Chicago nominee and get behind the county and state ticket as a solid body.

J. H. Peare was elected chairman for the fourth consecutive time. Thirty precincts out of the total of 36 in the county were represented at the meeting which took place in the City hall. Rousing speeches were made by several of those present and the formal Bull Moose organization joined hands with the regular Republicans.

C. R. Eberhard was re-elected secretary of the committee while R. J. Green, Arthur Hallgarth of Elgin and Norman Y. Stoddard of Perry constitute the executive committee for the next two years.

W. J. Church was chosen state committeeman and L. A. Wright of Union congressional committeeman.

The committee all voiced the opinion that it was a Republican year from top to bottom, and the only bit of criticism at what the party is doing that dropped out was objection to the triumvirate which heads the Multnomah county Central committee.

measure to the skillful management by Mr. Hill, who had shown himself not only a man of remarkable foresight but a financier of unusual ability.

In 1893 the Great Northern railway was formally opened and there was great enthusiasm throughout Minnesota. It ran from Duluth to the ocean and Hill was its president. The event was celebrated in St. Paul by great festivities and so determined were the citizens to do honor to Mr. Hill, that they insisted upon these festivities notwithstanding the offer of Mr. Hill to donate for the erection of a public library an amount equal to any amount which the city might appropriate for that purpose instead of spending the money for parades, floats, fireworks, etc.

Oregon Projects His Last. Construction of the North bank road from Spokane to Portland, and subsequent establishment of the steamer line from Flavel to San Francisco were final great efforts of his life.

Extended His Feeders. After Mr. Hill had realized his dream of an independent line to the Pacific coast and trains were running daily over his road between St. Paul and Tacoma and Seattle, he began to extend his system. He started a line of magnificent steamers between Seattle and Japan and established a fine line of steamers plying between Buffalo and Duluth, giving him an outlet to the Atlantic coast. In addition to that he built numerous feeders throughout the great grain belt of the Northwest and a string of grain elevators for storing and distributing the golden harvests of the tributary regions.

Home Life Maintained. Although always an extremely busy man, and occupied with matters of great importance to the commonwealth, Mr. Hill found time to lead a model home life. He was always fond of books and a great lover of art. In his magnificent residence in St. Paul he had one of the finest private collections of paintings in the country, containing many priceless masterpieces of older masters. Eight miles north of St. Paul he had a fine farm of more than 4,000 acres, called "North Oaks," where he devoted himself to scientific farming and stock breeding. He did not derive any profit from his farm, however, as he sold the young stock to farmers and breeders along his railroad lines for prices ordinarily demanded for common, unimproved stock.

the nations far away And when the peaceful Angels found "Old Glory" oh so dear They said suppose we leave it for it looks so peaceful here. So they planted on the stars and stripes the seeds of peace to grow it's the only place you'll find them, no matter where you go. Then they turned it back to Wilson, so his peaceful Father Land Could plant the seeds of peace and love in every foreign land. The dear old men who fought and fell the brave old G. A. R.'s They fought the fight at Gettysburg and other bloody wars, No wonder that we're proud of them, the old gray hairs of fame. They saved Old Glory from defeat and made its mighty name.
