You can see all right in the day time, but at night when that tire blows out on the hind wheel of your car, or you have to get out and get under to see why the little wheels do not go round, you will save yourself a whole lot of swearing, perhaps, and come a lot closer to the pearly gates if you have an Eveready Flash Light with you to help out on the job. OPENING DAY ROUTINE

ness the leading planks will be protection to American rights abroad women suffrage and a protective tariff.

Labor Leaders Ambitious.

Fire works is expected late today from Gompers and Morrison of the American Federation of Labor and James Emery, counsel for the National Association of Manufacturers. Labor will demand an anti-injunction plank.

Senator Fall of New Mexico will demand Mexican intervention, but Lodge and Borah doubt the wisdom of this.

Lodge Elected Chairman

Lodge was elected chairman of the Republican resolutions committee, and Charles Scott of Kansas, secretary. Lodge was authorized to appoint a sub-committee of nine to draft a platform. He appointed the following:

Borah Given Place.

Borah, of Idaho; Sutherland, Utah, Fall, New Mexico; Madden, Illinois; Howland, Ohio; Oliver, Pennsylvania; Wadsworth, New York and Clark, Connecticut.

Public hearings on platform questions begin at 4 this afternoon but secret sessions will be held tonight. Lodge said he talked with Roosevelt on the telephone—probably at midnight last night. He refused to reveal time and nature of the talk.

BULL MOOSERS

mon destiny—"that they must go up or down together"—that their first and necessary allegiance was to the common welfare of a single citizenship protecting and protected under one flag. So raucous and insistent have these voices been that for a time it seemed that half breed Americanism would rule a discordant, disunited people to the ruin of a nation.

Great Voice Heard.

"But through all these weary months there has been one great voice steadfastly, courageously, without a shade of compromise, without a note of indecision, calling upon our people to reject the counsels of division and rally to the one common cause of America. It was not strange that this was the voice of our leader of 1912. It was not strange that he spoke out when lesser statesmen feared to whisper, uncertain as they were alike of their own convictions and of the feelings of the crowd. It is not strange that he who followed him four years ago must once again in answer to his brave and faithful call.

Wants Leader Public Knows.

"The American people are waiting for the leader to be named here in Chicago. They want a leader whom they know and who speaks for them. They want firmness in our foreign affairs. They want certainty in standing and upholding the rights of American citizens. They want courage to announce a program and tenacity to fight it through. There are millions of patriotic men and women straining eyes toward Chicago and praying that the two great parties in convention may unite upon a man who will get things done. They have been reading speeches on preparedness and notes on American rights for dreary months—only to learn at last that we have no rights except those we are able to enforce and that we are not now prepared to enforce even the right of an American citizen to live within raiding distance of the Mexican border. We learn that more Americans have been killed in keeping peace with Mexico than were killed in fighting a war with Spain.

No Favorite Son Needed.

"It is a call for a man who represents no favorite section, no favorite strain of blood, no favorite creed, no favored class of citizens, but who has the respect of men of every section, blood and creed and class. It is a call for a man who stands for principles and not for prejudices—for a man who has been tried and found true—a call that America shall give to her citizens and to other nations not the hazard of a new deal, but the solid, certain comfort of the old square deal. It is a call when the ship of state is found in troubled waters, not to try another unknown hopeful pilot, but to put the old safe helmsman back upon the job. It is not a call for the favorite son of any state but for the favorite son of the nation.

"We want no military caste in this republic. We will have none if each man serves his training time and then returns to civil life—better physically and with a better understanding of the facts of war. We need have no fear of war being brought on needlessly in a nation where the entire voting population knows what war means to modern men. With universal service there will be no needless wars. The jingoes and the timid will be as acutely interested in a call to the colors as the quiet and courageous and we may be assured of peace as long as there can be a righteous peace. And we can be assured that in the terrible event of war the fighting will be done by those who made the war and not by brave victims of selfish ambition and treacherous greed.

"But modern warfare is not merely a matter of armament and men. If we are to make our preparedness a peace insurance, it must be adequate. We must organize the vast resources of the nation so that in sudden need without a costly period of industrial chaos, the equipment, the munitions, the food supply and transportation for large armies will be immediately at the service of the government. America trained, armed and ready, will be a nation practically assured of peace. America unarmed, untrained or unready, will be a nation practically assured of war."

Every preparedness and Americanism plank Roosevelt espoused the past year will be included in the Progressive platform along with woman suffrage and labor reform. A preliminary draft of the platform has been completed and largely under Roosevelt's own direction. It includes the following:

"Preparedness (including universal service and a great navy. Americanism (with emphasis on a necessary strong foreign policy). National woman suffrage; improvement of labor conditions through enforcement of a strict child labor law; further extension of the initiative, referendum; advocacy of more liberal changes in the national constitution; a tariff commission; extension of American trade with an enlarged merchant marine.

It is predicted efforts of Prohibitionists to secure a dry plank will meet with failure.
