"there should be a unity in education as there is a unity of truth. And I believe that to be the true education which preserves this unity and has for its purpose the imparting of truth, both of the natural and supernatural order.

"Herein lies the philosophy of Catholic education—a philosophy so simple that one would think it quite unnecessary either to offer an explanation or defence of it. For the one who believes in the existence of God—in His providence—in the love and interest He bears towards His children in this world, the propriety of training those children to know and love and serve Him must appeal as an essential factor in their training and development.

"But again, as we believe, to do our part in this world, to fulfill our obligation in society and as citizens, there is needed knowledge of things, secular science exact and speculative, the truth and laws of nature, the facts and figures which by their acquisition fit the individual for the performance of his various duties. Hence the necessity of the best training in these things.

"This is the time of Catholic schools, to train the child in his duties to God and to fit him for the performance of his obligations of the highest citizenship.

"Such a program cannot justly be referred to as narrow and sectarian—as hostile to secular schools or to the spirit of the country or to the demands of an exalted patriotism. The very opposite is the truth. A religious school is not established to blotter up a creed, for that creed must stand upon firmer foundations.

"It is not established either to antagonize secular schools. These latter have their province. And considering the many who belong to no religion, and, too considering the multiplicity of creeds, they are the best solution the state can offer for the training of the diverse groups of citizens.

"And it should not be forgotten that Catholics pay their taxes for the support of the public schools, and recognizing the American principle of no "taxation without representation" justly lay claim to a voice and consideration in all that makes for the advancement of the State schools.

"The religious schools, instead of being opposed to the demands of patriotism are, in fact, the promoters of that patriotism which springs from and is established in divine sanction and benediction.

"Every page of history bears evidence that they serve their country best who love and serve God most—who refuse to admit a divided allegiance—who remember the Gospel injunction that we should be subject to the powers that be, since all power comes from God.

"To you, graduates of Sacred Heart Academy, I would say, be practical in your religious duties, be pronounced in your patriotism, honor God, serve your country, be just, be fair in your dealings with all.

"And all those duties, while springing from Christian teaching and exalted patriotism, will find their inspiration and their highest commendation, in that religious training wherein you see the God of nations guarding and guiding the world's destinies.

"I am glad to see that in America there is that broad and tolerant spirit—that willingness to understand one another—that desire to be mutually helpful, which means so much for our Catholic schools and people, and would urge us all the more to work untidely into the dissipation of whatever prejudice or misunderstandings may still exist.

"Young lady graduates, I wish you every success in the years to come, and I would say to you in conclusion: Go into the world with hearts throbbing with noble impulses, and inspired by the exalted ambitions for God and country which have been fostered in this splendid institution. And when the years of your youth have slipped away and the battle of life has left its scars on you, you will come back some day, and renewing the associations of former years with these walls, recalling the memory of the lessons you received in virtue and science, fervently, honestly, and with your whole heart in your words, you will say in deepest gratitude—God bless you, Sacred Heart Academy. May God's blessings rest upon the work you are doing in this community, and the noble and cultured women whose lives are consecrated to that work. May your future greatness fully realize the golden promises of your youth. And when the future historian shall compile the annals of the growth of this progressive section of the fair State of Oregon, and shall record the various moral and intellectual forces which are shadowed in the horoscope of years, high upon the pages of its splendor may there appear the name of Sacred Heart Academy, one of the strongest factors for true education of mind and heart in Eastern Oregon."

COMMENCEMENT ATTRACTS.

Visitors From Many Parts of Oregon at State College for Graduation.

Oregon Agricultural College, Corvallis, June 7.—Parents of graduates and a large number of other visitors from many parts of Oregon are at Corvallis attending the forty-seventh Annual Commencement Exercises of the Oregon Agricultural College.

Graduation exercises are held today at 11 o'clock. The address of the class will be delivered by Enoch Albert Bryan, ex-president of Washington State College. More than 300 students will receive recognition from the college on having completed a definite course. There will be 17 masters' degrees issued, and 29 vocational certificates.

The exercises began Friday when the women of the college, 450 strong, put on the campus pageant, "The Passing of the Seasons" and "A Russian Fete Day."

Saturday was Alumni day when old graduates representing almost every part of the state, were in attendance. The class of 1911 was especially well represented.

Baccalaureate day was Sunday, June 4. The baccalaureate address was delivered by Dr. Luther Dyott, of the First Congregational Church, Portland, Oregon. Special music was furnished by a male chorus under the direction of Professor William Frederick Gaskins.

On Monday, class day, the class of 1916 formally presented to the college a beautiful bronze drinking fountain. The fountain was set up in front of agricultural hall. A brass plate bearing the legend "Presented by Class of 1916," rests on the supporting base. Data concerning the class were buried under the cornerstone. The fountain itself is of the bronze Benson type and was purchased at a cost of $400. It was formally accepted by President Kerr for the Oregon Agricultural College.

No More Free Cigars

Spokane, Wash., May 30.—No more free cigars, candy or oranges for Spokane folks who pay their grocery bills. Almost unanimously the members of the Spokane Retail Grocers' and Butcher's association have decided to discontinue handing out little treats as a reward to customers who pay their bills each Saturday night. It was agreed that this practice in effect showed preference to patrons who ran up bills rather than to those who paid cash for each purchase.

Didn't Miss Day In 17 Years

Spokane, Wash., May 30.—Seventeen consecutive years of service without missing a single shift is the record claimed by a Spokane workman. He is William Manier, aged 43, engineer and assistant soap maker at the Western Soap Company. "Manier" went to work as a young man of 26 in the box factory of the old Spokane Soap works, which became the Western states Frank E. Irvine, president-manager of the company. "He never missed a single shift in seventeen years. He has worked in every department of the company and at nearly every job." Manier is a bachelor.

CONGOLEUM RUGS

Ideal for the living room

Congoleum Rugs have aided in solving what was a perplexing problem to many housewives—how to make the living room cheerful at moderate cost.

Congoleum Rugs are made by a new and wonderful process. They do not fade in the sun, lie flat without fraying and never "kick up". To clean them, wash them for they are waterproof. Congoleum Rugs are a remarkable value.

BISHOP GIVES SOUND ADVISE

ACADEMY PROGRAM YESTERDAY POPULAR

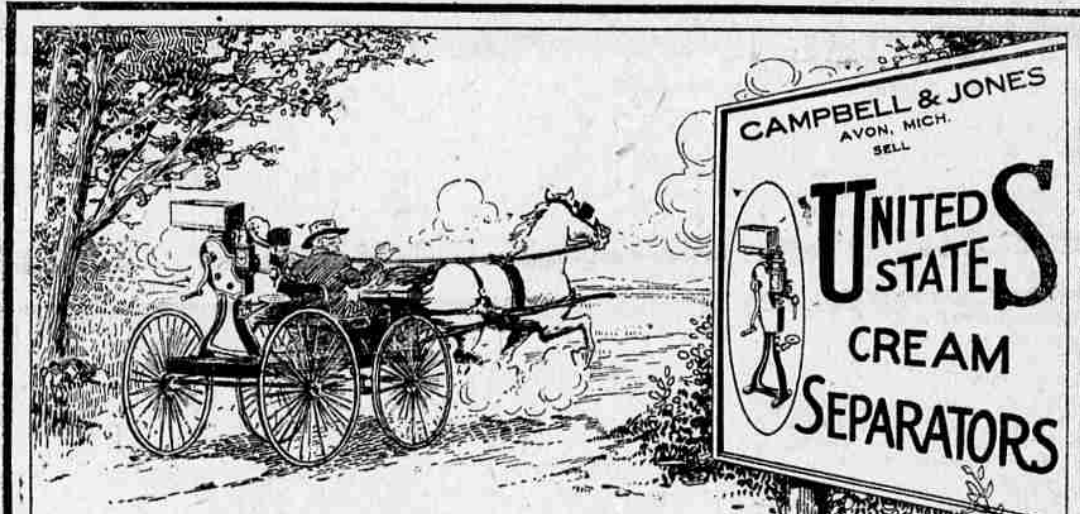

Bishop O'Reilly Principal Speaker to Students

The closing exercises of Sacred Heart Academy were held yesterday afternoon in Academy Hall before a large crowd of parents and friends. A program of vocal and instrumental music of a high order of excellence interspersed with recitations, drills and tableaux was presented by the children and elicited hearty applause. The Gregg Banners awarded to the school for advanced work in commercial branches were prominently displayed. Only four of these have been awarded in the State of Oregon, the Oregon Agricultural College, Sacred Heart Academy, and schools in Astoria and Medford being the recipients.

The address to the graduates was made by Right Reverend Charles J. O'Reilly, D. D., Bishop of Baker. In the course of his remarks the Bishop brought out the fact that Catholic schools are neither established to develop any creed nor to antagonize secular schools, and that secular schools are indispensable to the state in the training of a vast number of non-Catholic citizens.

"I believe," said Bishop O'Reilly,

CAMPBELL & JONES AVON, MICH. SELL UNITED STATES CREAM SEPARATORS

TAKE ONE HOME TO-DAY

Nothing gives me so much pleasure as to see a dairyman and his wife driving home with a U. S. Cream Separator in the wagon. It's plumb sure to cement our friendship, and add to my future business.

The last "U. S." that left the store actually sold itself on its sanitary points alone. You see the wife was along, and she knew what it meant to keep one of those old disc type separators sweet and clean.

JUST FOLLOW ME

"Just follow me," I told these good folks, "and I'll take you through the United States Separator just like you were going through the U. S. Capitol."

We started in with the cast iron bowl chamber, which in most separators is a rough, uncleanable catch basin for grease and slopped milk as unsanitary as can be. But in the U. S. Separator, there is a removable, non-rusting, sanitary lining for the iron bowl chamber, which absolutely prevents any spilled milk from coming in contact with the cast iron.

But the mechanically washed skimming device itself is what made the big hit with the dairyman and his wife. In most skimmers steel is used, and rust gets busy right away on the "thousand-and-one" different parts. In U. S. Skimmers, nothing can rust; they are made of costly Nickel-Silver, absolutely non-rusting.

The frame of a United States Separator is open at the base, for easy cleaning. There are no exposed gears, pockets, or ledges to collect dust, grease, and milk. You can clean over it, around it, and under it.

And here is another important sanitary argument that appeals to all practical dairy people. The bowl of the U. S. Cream Separator has openings at the bottom which keep it perfectly drained. Nothing stands in this bowl after running. No slop ever self and floor as with bowls that must be hand-emptied.

SEEING IS BELIEVING

I wish every dairyman in the country would take the time to look over a U. S. while I act as "guide." Take an afternoon off, and drive in with your wife. Better bring the open wagon, for you will probably want to take one home.

C. S. NORRIS, President of Union County Co-Opp. Ass'n.
