ARCADE

PICTURESQUE SCENES. "The Corner" Shows Homes of Great and Hovels of Poor.

"The Corner," which is the new Triangle-Ince production at the Arcade theatre Wednesday and Thursday, is a play that is interesting to all sorts and conditions of men and women. It will appeal to the refined and luxury loving class, for it is full of scenes showing interiors of a millionaire's home. There is a quiet tone of elegance in every article of furniture or ornament. David Walton, the rich speculator (George Fawcett), is shown in both evening dress and business apparel. His wife appears in stunning gowns and has the manner of the well-born.

Then the plot is interesting in its novelty of theme and the unexpectedness of its denouement. There is a great suspense in the action and an audience holds its breath in critical scenes. There's a run on a bank when men and women rush madly to and fro as they fear that their pitiful savings will be swept away. Then there is a long bread line. A great climax is the scene where John Adams (Willard Mack) deceals Walton to his own ware-house, overpowers him and leaves him concealed there after binding him hand and foot. Then Walton in his struggles brings a great avalanche of cans and boxes down in a heap, burying him completely.

SERGE AND SILK ARE STILL POPULAR

Jersey silk serge in citron color is used and banded at the bottom of the coat and the bottom of the skirt with putty colored gros grain silk. The skirt has a flare that suggests hoops; the long hip point of the coat is a new note and the rolling collar is worth noting—it's new and much in favor.

The Lure of Far Lands. With a reasonable capital, youth, strength, character and a knowledge of the language fortunes can be made relatively easier on the frontiers of civilization than at home. There are, however, many privations to be borne. You are away from friends. Mails at best come once a week. News is scarce. Daily papers exist only in metropolitan towns, and the data they contain are meager. In many localities fresh vegetables cannot be had. Drinking water is positively dangerous. Flies, bugs, mosquitoes and a host of winged, stinging, biting insects are present to annoy during day and night. Most hotels are bad and the food strange, unpalatable and poorly cooked.

For women but few real opportunities exist. I know of but two women lawyers in Latin America, and there are perhaps the same number of doctors and dentists. Relatively small proportions of the fair sex follow commercial callings. In the far east and Africa caste, the system of "purdah" and the general belief that woman is inferior to man have retarded her progress.—W. E. Aughinbaugh in Les lle's.

Keep in the Sunshine. There are only two kinds of people in the world—the people who live in the shadow and gloom and those who live on the sunny side of the street. These shadowed ones are sometimes called pessimists, sometimes people of melancholy temperament; sometimes they are called disagreeable people. But, wherever they go, their characteristic is this—their shadows always travel on before them. These people never bear their own burden, but expose all their wounds to others. They are all so busy looking down for pitfalls and sharp stones and thorns on which to step that they do not even know that there are any stars in the sky. These folks live on the wrong side of the street. And yet it is only twenty feet across to the other sidewalk, where sunshine always lies.—Newell Dwight Hillis.

Divorces in Ancient Rome. In the earlier period of the Roman republic divorces were quite unknown and were rare right up to the time of the Sullan wars. In the old days the husband and wife who wished to separate appeared for the last time before the common hearth, a priest and priestess being present. As on the day of marriage, a cake of wheat flour was presented to the husband and wife, but instead of sharing it between them they rejected it. Then instead of prayers they pronounced formulas of a strange, severe, spiteful character, by which the wife renounced the worship and gods of the husband. From that moment the religious bond was broken, and the community of worship having ceased to exist, the marriage without further ado was forever dissolved.—Exchange.

The Double Balls. Shuang ch'iu'er, although the name may sound like a disease, is not a form of writer's cramp. On the contrary, "their" purpose is to prevent it. The words mean "the double balls," and shuang ch'iu'er are two iron balls an inch or so in diameter, which nestle in the right hand of every Chinese man of letters for hours each day, one being revolved about the other until they are worn bright. They are just large enough to make a handful, and the action of shifting one about the other brings the fingers into play and lends them that suppleness and digital dexterity which are necessary in the manipulation of the Chinese lettering pen or fine pointed brush. Of what a simplicity!

Ways of the Mole. No animal is more wonderfully adapted to its kind of life than is the mole. Moleskin is famous for its exquisite smoothness and softness. The finest velvet cannot bear comparison with it. This is evidently a provision of nature for enabling the little animal to pass rapidly through its narrow underground galleries without impediment or friction, going backward or forward with equal ease. It fits its burrow like a piston and pushes itself swiftly with hind feet. The burrows and nests, too, are lined with fine, soft vegetable fibers.—New York Journal.

Making It Last. Mistress (to chauffeur, who is crawling downhill)—Why are you driving so slowly? Chauffeur (ex-courtiann)—Well, ma'am, you told me to be as economical as possible, so I was putting the brake on to make the downhill last as long as possible.—London Punch.

Banner Carried by Cortes. In the national museum in Mexico City there is a very interesting relic of the Spanish conquest of this country known as the banner of the conquest. It is said to be the original standard carried by Cortes in his wars of conquest in the land of the Aztecs.

A Festival of Flowers. At Genzano, Italy, near Rome, during the festival of flowers one of the streets is carpeted with genuine flowers in elaborate designs. The work and designing are done by the people who live on the street. This festival dates back to 1778.

The Dulling Touch of Age. You can never tell. Perhaps the man who says the most fool things now used to get off something bright and sensible when he was a baby.—Houston Post.

In youth we learn, in age we understand. To grow old is to receive sight.—Von Euber Eschenbach.

HISTORIC BRENNER PASS.

This Alpine Gap is a Famous Pathway For Great Armies. The mighty Brenner pass is the Thermopylae of Tyrol. From times immemorial the northern tribes have sought the refinements and culture of the south over this wonderful Alpine saddle, first in fame among all the gaps in the rugged Alpine defenses against the north, and a way which has echoed to the dying cries of warriors and clashing accouterments of myriad Roman legions and to the noisy disorder of the passage of many armies through more than 2,000 years of restless history.

Innsbruck, the Tyrolean capital, is at the northern terminus of this way, while Botzen, the largely Latinized metropolis of the south, lies 3,600 feet below. Innsbruck is exclusively of the northland, surrounded by pines, apples and fir trees, and Botzen, like Italy beyond the mountains, is in the midst of a region of vines, figs and olives. Historic points crowd one another along the Brenner. Guidestones of the time of Caracalla and Septimius Severus have been found buried here. Some of the world's greatest generals have traveled this path, north and south, and here the Tyrolean peasant, Andreas Hofer, the simple, untaught Austrian hero, proved himself greater than one of the best officers of Napoleon.—National Geographic Bulletin.

TIRELESS INSECTS.

Built For the Strenuous Life, They Are Never Weary.

In "Insects, Their Life Histories and Habits," Harold Bastin, the entomologist, says that, contrary to popular belief, spiders are not insects. Insects have six legs, neither more nor less, and another peculiarity of the insect is that it has wings, sometimes two, more often four. Spiders have eight legs and no wings; therefore spiders are not insects.

Insects have no backbones and no skeletons, says Mr. Bastin, but skins with a hard, durable surface called chitin, which makes up a light shell of armor that forms the outside of the body, to the inside of which the muscles are attached.

Insects do not breathe through their mouths, but through holes in their bodies, called spiracles. Insects have neither veins nor arteries. The blood is pumped directly from the chambered heart into the body cavity, where it bathes and nourishes the organs. Insects have wonderful and enviable digestive organs and feed upon and digest almost any substance from which nourishment may be extracted.

Because of the way they are built, insects are particularly fitted for the strenuous life, and a tired insect is a thing unknown. They are always busy traveling, buzzing, biting or seeking some work to do.

A "Primitive" Painter.

Henri Rousseau, a man who used to hold a minor government position in France, was for a quarter of a century the joke of artists and art students in Paris. For years in the independent salon he showed daubs which had not the most distant kinship with art. Some of his "famous" pictures were a "Lady on a Sofa in a Jungle," a "Tiger in a Jungle," a "Nigger in a Jungle." He affected jungles, which consisted of innumerable parallel green lines to represent grass; the tiger was a painted wooden toy; the lady looked as if she had come out of Noah's ark. The unfortunate Rousseau went on exhibiting the same sort of work every year, and the painful thing was that he gradually became a celebrity. Sinister humorists told him he had genius, and he took himself quite seriously. "I am a real primitive," he would say. Some practical jokers even went the length of buying his pictures.

Portuguese Burial Custom.

They have an unusual mode of burial in Portugal. Instead of the headstones and monuments of the graveyards of other countries the cemetery of Lisbon shows rows and rows of tiny chapels ranged in long avenues bordered by cypress trees. The Portuguese are reluctant to bury their dead out of sight, and these chapels serve as mortuaries for the coffins, which are placed on the shelves within. Through the iron grills the eye discerns small altars and flowers gleaming through the subdued light of the interiors.—Manchester Courier.

In Its Grateful Shade.

"I have aimed at health and happiness. When confronted with a formidable obstacle," said Sir George Reid on his seventieth birthday, "I have always first tried to knock it over. Failing this, I try to get around it; failing that, to get over it or under it. If I did not then succeed I have been content to lie down in its grateful shade, praising the obstacle as a blessing in disguise."—London Standard.

Unfair Suggestion.

Wife—Do you think Tommy disturbs our neighbor with his drum? Husband—I'm afraid so. The man next door made him a present of a nice new kaffe today and suggested that Tommy should cut open the drum and spend the money that is inside.—Milwaukee Free Press.

Not The Last.

The Wife—Those trousers of yours look as if they were on their last legs. The Husband—Well, they're not. Johnnie will have to wear 'em after I get through with 'em.—Chicago News.

Would they could sell us experience, though at diamond prices! But, then, no one would use the article second-hand.—Balzac.

Safe. Willis—"Then you don't think there is any danger of us New Yorkers ever being prisoners of a foreign foe?" Gillis—"Absolutely none. How could the enemy get in? The trains don't run in the winter, the roads are too muddy in the fall, and the streets are all torn up in the spring, and if they did get in during the summer they'd find everybody away."—Life.
