Prisoner Reprieved Five Times.

Murphyboro, Ill., June 29.—Ellston Scott, Illinois' most reprieved murderer, sits calmly in his cell in the county jail here, confident he never will hang for the murder of his sister-in-law at Carbondale last summer. Scott was sentenced to hang October 16th last but has been reprieved five times by Governor Dunne. His latest reprieve gives him life until July 14. The many reprieves grow out of a dispute between Governor Dunne and Sheriff White of Jackson county. Shortly before the date set for Scott's hanging here Joe Deberry, another negro murderer expiated his crime on the gallows. Large posters announcing that moving pictures of the hanging would be shown at a local moving picture theatre reached Governor Dunne. He made an investigation and, according to his statement, two thousand persons, most of who had paid $2 for their tickets, saw the Deberry hanging. Believing the hanging of Deberry a disgrace to Illinois Governor Dunne, shortly before the date Scott was scheduled to hang, wired Sheriff White of this county to send him the specific number of persons who would witness the execution. Sheriff White replied by stating he would comply with the law which, in this state, allows him a sufficient number of deputies to prevent trouble. The answer did not satisfy Governor Dunne and he reprieved Scott. The same routine has been gone through five times. Now Scott insists he will never hang. Governor Dunne insists he never will commute Scott's sentence to life, as the crime was "too revolting to be expiated by anything but death." Governor Dunne is especially antagonistic to capital punishment and might see Scott still alive when his term expires next March.
