PERSONAL MENTION

Mrs. Elmer Akins, of Zumwalt, Willowa county, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Underwood on Oak street.

M. A. Fitzgerald is home from an extended trip through the East. He went to Detroit to represent the Brotherhood of Railway Conductors, at the convention, and after that went to New York and to his old home in Illinois, visiting at many big eastern cities while on the trip. He is back on his run this morning.

J. T. Williamson is a visitor today in Pendleton on business matters.

Mrs. Stringer of Butte arrived this morning to pay a surprise visit to her sister Mrs. Ed Thomas of this city. As Mrs. Stringer left the train her sister was boarding it to go to Pendleton with her husband and son Frank for the day. The happy surprise was responsible for Mrs. Thomas returning to her home and the men going on to Pendleton. Mrs. Stringer's daughter Elvina accompanied her.

Mrs. H. C. Grady left last evening for her home in Portland after having been in attendance at the Chautauqua for several days. She reports that here son Harold is doing vaudeville in Nebraska this week and in company with his wife will pass through La Grande shortly en route to Portland.

Prof. George Hug, principal of the McMinnville schools, was called to La Grande on account of the illness, which terminated fatally, of his mother, Mrs. Mary Hug.

L. A. Wright, druggist of Union, was on a short business stay in La Grande this morning.

M. S. Levy came over from Union this morning and continued his trip to Elgin where he goes on business.

W. C. Coombs, a stockman of Starkey, is down on a business trip.

Mrs. Wright and daughter Miss Georgia, of Union, who were attendants at the park are continuing their stay a few days at the home of their son and brother, County Clerk Ed Wright.

"Bobby" Parker, an old resident of the Starkey district, is on a mid-summer holiday in La Grande.

Educators in Session

New York, July 5.—Preparations for war and peace, the education of negroes and alien population are the key notes of today's session of the National Education association here. G. Stanley Hall, president of Clark University, Worcester, Massachusetts, addressed the association on "The Present War and Education." He declared that the training which best fits for efficiency in time of peace should be emphasized in our program of education. Fanny Fern Andrews, secretary of the American school peace league, Boston, advocated peace with honor at any price. She declared "Nothing is more conspicuous in the present war than the sensitiveness of the belligerents to the charges of violations of treaties and the established law of nations. The combined action of modern powers represented generally by the head conferences has developed this sense of responsibility—a great step in world progress. On those who administer education in this critical time rests the responsibility of preserving and advancing those ideals for which all civilized nations are striving, and especially have the teachers of this nation an important part to play. Hollis B. Frissell, Industrial Institute, Hampton, Virginia, spoke on "The Education of the Negro" in which he especially emphasized the need of specific vocational training as the secret of educating the negro race. "The Education of the Alien" was discussed by John H. Finley of New York, state commissioner of education. Dr. Finley advocates the teaching of languages, efficiency in trades and occupations, better home conditions, and the emphasis of the highest American ideals. Homer H. Searley, president of the Iowa State Teachers College of Cedar Falls, advocated national aid for all forms of vocational education. Other associations meeting today with the National Education association are: American school hygiene association; federation of state teachers associations; the league of teachers associations; the American home economics association; the national council of the teachers of English and the American posture league. Eight hundred leading educators of the association were guests at the luncheon given at the Waldorf Astoria in honor of David B. Johnson, president of the association, by the Department of School Administration.
