Two Mazamas Reach Summit.

White Salmon, Wash., July 6.—Nelson English and H. L. Wolbor, members of the Multnomah Amateur Athletic club party of Mazamas, managed to reach the summit of Mount Adams, out of the 68 starting on the ascent, and these two faced the greatest difficulties and dangers. The rest of the party halted 1600 feet below the summit of the peak. The two men were forced to crawl on their hands and knees for the last few hundred feet owing to the terrific force of the wind, which at the same time drove small particles of glass-like snow and ice into their faces.
