ARCADE

Geraldine Farrar in "Maria Rosa."

Geraldine Farrar, the noted grand opera prima donna and motion picture star of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play company, will appear at the Arcade on Friday and Saturday in "Maria Rosa," said by those who have seen it to be the best of the three photoplays she made for the Lasky company, the others being "Carmen" and "Temptation." Like the others "Maria Rosa" was produced by Cecil B. DeMille. Wallace Reid appears in the leading masculine role. These are facts of exceptional interest in connection with Miss Farrar in "Maria Rosa," as it was during the making of this photoplay that she met and fell in love with Mr. Lou Tellegen, whom she recently married. Three years ago when Mr. Lou Tellegen came to the United States to make his debut on the American stage as an English speaking actor, he chose as his first play, "Maria Rosa."

Previously the young actor had appeared for two seasons in American tours as leading man with Mme. Sarah Bernhardt.

STATE AID SCHEME TO WAIT

Proposal For Reclamation Delayed Because Some Fail To Give Support.

Portland, June 19.—Oregon voters will not have the opportunity next November of passing on a proposed constitutional amendment providing for state aid to irrigation and drainage projects.

J. W. Brewer, president of the Oregon Irrigation Congress, which initiated the movement for the proposed amendments, said yesterday that the plan will be dropped for the present owing to the lack of support from quarters that had been counted on for assistance.

The committee on irrigation-drainage, composed of J. B. Kerr, C. C. Chapman and A. B. Thompson, has made its report. Two amendments are proposed, the first providing for the state purchase of bonds and other evidences of indebtedness issued by irrigation or drainage vested with the power of taxation, provided the interest on such bonds or evidences of indebtedness shall first have been guaranteed by some county or counties. The second amendment authorizes counties to guarantee the interest on such bonds or evidences of indebtedness, the annual liability not to exceed 2 per cent of the assessed valuation of the county.

"The plan looks good on paper, but will not work out in practice," said President Brewer, yesterday. "A study of the assessed valuation of the counties in which lie the large bodies of semi-arid land and the cost of construction of the proposed projects, shows conclusively that the plan outlined will not prove satisfactory. Figures from six of the Eastern Oregon counties show that only one of them has sufficient assessed valuation to guarantee the interest at 5 per cent on the projects now proposed.

"If these counties had sufficient assessed valuation to guarantee the interest on bonds as outlined in the amendment proposed there would be no need for a state guarantee, as bonds would sell readily and at reasonable rates with the county back of them."

"The Truth In Advertising"

New York, June 20.—The New York Tribune is the defendant in a $50,000 libel suit brought by one of the large department stores of New York. For a year the Tribune has been conducting a department in the interest of "truth in advertising," and the articles for this are prepared by Mr. Samuel Hopkins Adams. Mr. Adams has been doing a good deal of slashing, very much to the detriment and discomfort of a lot of merchants, who have been engaged in short-changing the public. In the particular instance from which the libel suit arose, the Tribune notified the merchants of their intention to publish the article, and an injunction proceeding was started. In consequence the controversy then became famous. It is understood that the principal basis for damages alleged to have been sustained by the merchants grew out of the notoriety resulting from the preliminary proceedings, rather than the alleged disclosures contained in the story itself. The Tribune, in carrying the news of the suit says that "the article itself, which gave extensive details of the investigation made by the Tribune is not attacked."

The Hero Worshipers

Walking along a railroad track one Saturday afternoon we discovered a stone but in which two factory boys were playing cards and "taking turns" on a pipe. They were the leaders of a gang, and the others had been sent out to swipe enough tin to cover the roof. At last we had found the headquarters of the terrors of the town. Perhaps we should have had them arrested, but we didn't. Instead of a policeman we sent a young college graduate who liked boys and who believed that every boy could be reached if one could only touch the hidden spring. He touched it. He got acquainted, became their friend and then their leader, and in six months the gang became a boy scout patrol—a constructive force instead of a destructive force in the community. Was it worth while? I shall never forget when Jack Hardy started with his club at University Settlement, in New York. There were six typical East Side boys of seventeen and it looked like a hopeless job. Jack was nervous himself, for he did not have much experience to help him. But he had the determination, patience, tact and spirit of service and he "made good". Athletics, hikes, indoor games gradually took the place of saloons, girls and pool rooms. Cheap shows and dirty stories were succeeded by good entertainments and 'club debates'. In one year the club grew to twenty, and Jack was the quiet master of the situation.

He has stuck to the club for three years. Several of his boys have gone to school or college, and the others frankly asked one of them how Jack did it, he replied, "Well, I don't know exactly, he never preached much. He just showed us something better and then talked to us straight. When we got to going better we wanted to stay so, and he helped us. I guess it was his own life more than anything else that did the stunt." "His own life," the life of Jack, their hero.—The Christian Herald.
