IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

Take a glass of Salts to flush out your Kidneys and neutralize irritating acids.

Kidney and Bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in voiding it. Bladder weakness, most folks call it because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again. Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink, which quickly relieves bladder trouble.

FLYING BULLETS.

Forces That Control the Curve They Take to Reach the Ground.

The trajectory of a rifle is the curve which the bullet describes in traveling from the muzzle of the rifle to its mark at a given range. This curve is the component of two forces—first, the momentum imparted to the bullet in the rifle barrel and, second, the downward pull of gravitation. Many persons have the erroneous idea that so long as a body is traveling ahead very fast it will not drop.

The fallacy of this notion can be very prettily shown by a laboratory experiment in which two rubber balls of the same size and weight are projected from a miniature catapult at precisely the same instant, but in such a way that ball A has double the velocity of ball B. Although ball A will travel twice as far as ball B before it strikes the floor, it will always be observed that the two balls strike the floor at the same instant.

High velocity, then, does not free a rifle bullet from the effect of gravity, but it does enable it to travel a greater distance ahead before it has had time to fall any given distance. That is the true reason why high velocity tends to give a low trajectory. For comparison of cartridges the height of the trajectory at midrange is generally taken as the standard.—Outing.

APACHES OF PARIS.

Strife Over an Underworld Beauty Led to Their Undoing.

The apaches of Paris are an order of the lowest and most dangerous criminals in the world. There is not a great central organization like the Italian orders and no fixed rules or assemblies. It consists merely of groups of crooks operating in different quarters of the city. These little groups or circles take their names from the quarter of the city that they inhabit and have their own conventional signs, places of meeting, leaders and the like. The members are usually young, beginning as boys of ten or fifteen years.

The women associated with these criminal bands are called marmites in the vernacular of the underworld. There was a struggle in Paris between the apache bands of Manda and Lecca, involving, like the Iliad, the abduction of a Helen. She was a famous beauty in the subterranean cafes of Paris and called in the argot of Montmartre, La Casque d'Or. The very name has the ring of romance. She was betrothed to the leader of the Manda and was carried off by the rival band of Lecca. War followed between the bands—a bitter, vindictive, bloody feud.

This contest destroyed the apache ascendancy in Paris.—Melville D. Post in Saturday Evening Post.

Threatened the King.

The honor of knighthood is not one which appeals to everybody. Coke of Norfolk, who considered that he had a far better claim than the speaker to the designation of first commoner of England, strongly disliked the idea of a handle to his name. This fact was well known to George IV. When Coke was chosen to head a deputation praying the king to dismiss from his person and council those advisers who by their conduct had proved themselves alike enemies to the throne and people George announced that he would get even with him. "If Coke of Norfolk enters my presence," he declared, "I swear I'll knight him." The threat was repeated to Coke, who rejoined, "If he dares such a thing I swear I'll break his sword." And, as the sturdy Norfolk squire was quite capable of doing this, George refrained from carrying out his threat.

Feet of the Chameleon.

In their tongue, their feet and their eyes chameleons differ remarkably from other lizards. Their feet, though possessing five toes, are divided into two grasping groups, looking like a hand in mittens, and only by close examination you perceive the presence of the two or the three opposing respectively, but so close together as to appear like one broad one. On the padded soles or palms of these grasping limbs you can feel and see the small—may one say—palpi, which enable them to grasp so firmly that it is difficult to detach a chameleon from its foothold. These clinging feet, together with their prehensile tail, enable them to sustain themselves on the branches in the strongest gale.

PROHIBITION LAW SMASHED

BROWN WILL ENFORCE LAW TO THE LAST.

Many Think That if Decision Is Upheld Law Is Valueless.

General discussion is rampant as a consequence of a decision in a Portland Circuit court this week, knocking the props out from under liberal sections of the prohibition law, Attorney General Brown yesterday announced officials of the state would continue to enforce the law until the Supreme court had ruled, but there is much speculation here, not withstanding this. A Portland paper outlines the decision as follows: Circuit Judge Morrow has rendered a decision, overruling the demurrer to the complaint in the suit of Wadhams & Co. against the San Francisco & Portland Steamship Co., which, in the opinion of the district attorney, practically puts Oregon's prohibition law out of business if the decision should be sustained by the higher courts.

Judge Morrow holds that the provision of the prohibition law limiting to wholesale druggists the right to import alcohol in large quantities is in violation of the interstate commerce clause of the federal constitution. He holds that any genuine manufacturer may import as much alcohol as he desires for his own use.

Possession of Alcohol Not Unlawful. "The Webb-Kenyon act, which was relied upon by the state in this suit," said Judge Morrow, "is so phrased that it reads to prohibit the importation of liquor or alcohol for use in violation of law. It applies in states which have absolute prohibition, but the Oregon law provides a manufacturer can have alcohol but he cannot import it. As the possession of alcohol by a genuine manufacturer is not unlawful, it is in violation of the interstate commerce clause of the federal constitution to attempt to prohibit him from importing such alcohol directly himself."

Judge Morrow declared his decision follows the decision of the United States Supreme court in the case of the Adams Express company against the state of Kentucky.

He pointed out that while the result of his decision might be the springing up of many pseudo manufacturing plants, it would be up to the district attorney and other law enforcing officers, in enforcing the law, to keep a watchful eye out for blindpiggers masquerading as manufacturing plants.

Scheme of Oregon Law.

Deputy District Arthur Murphy, who argued in support of the demurrer upon invitation of the defendant, said that, as the scheme of the Oregon law is to suppress and regulate the liquor traffic through its manner of receipt into the state, that Judge Morrow's decision will nullify two-thirds of the law. He pointed out that it is not unlawful for an individual to possess liquor in any quantity, but the law prohibits him from receiving more than two quarts of whiskey in a period of four weeks.

Law May Be Nullified.

"If the courts will hold that it is unconstitutional to prohibit a manufacturer from importing alcohol but allow him to use alcohol," said Mr. Murphy, "then the provision which prohibits a man from buying more than two quarts of whiskey but allows him to possess whiskey must be unconstitutional, too. So there will be nothing left of the law."

He said the purpose of the Webb-Kenyon act, passed by congress to assist states in enforcing prohibitory laws, was to divert liquor of its interstate character when it was to be received, as well as possessed, used or disposed of in violation of law. He said the Oregon legislature had in mind, when it passed the prohibition law, that the Webb-Kenyon act diverted intoxicating liquors of their interstate character, thereby making them subject to state laws, prior to their receipt.

"In other words," said Mr. Murphy, "the legislature proceeded on the theory that the Webb-Kenyon act makes the manner of receipt of liquors subject to state regulation, and the Oregon law was built on that foundation. It provides for the making of certain affidavits when liquor is received, it limits the amount that may be received, etc. A large part of the act is taken up with prescribing the manner in which intoxicating liquors may be received, and it seems to me that Judge Morrow's decision knocks out the whole business."

Law Upheld in Federal Court.

A somewhat similar case was recently before Judge Bean of the federal court, and he upheld the constitutionality of the Oregon law.

The present action was brought by Wadhams & Co., wholesale grocers and manufacturers of flavoring extracts, against the steamship company to gain possession of two barrels of alcohol which were shipped from San Francisco. It is a suit between private parties and the state was represented by the district attorney's office only upon invitation. The state cannot appeal. If the question is to be carried to the supreme court it must be done at the instance of the defendant, but as the district attorney was invited to appear it is considered probable that the transportation company will permit the question to be appealed.

Son of Mexican Bandit in Militia.

Camp Willis, Columbus, O., July 27. —The son of a Mexican bandit chief is in the ranks of the Ohio national guardsmen here today. He is Oscar Jones, private, Co. I, Second regiment, of Kenton.

Oscar's father was chief of one of the lawless bands that ravage northern Mexico and the border.

"His escapades brought ruin to us and broke my mother's heart—that's why I'm in the ranks, hating my father's people," said Jones.

"Jones is a willing worker. He'll make a good soldier," said Capt. Edward Collins.
