Shadows of Seven Prisons on Him. Seattle, Wash., Aug. 2.—Harry G. Hammond was back in Seattle today from McNeil Island federal prison preparing to test, if necessary, the constitutionality of the habitual criminal law, under which persons convicted three times may be sent to the penitentiary for life.

He "fell" first in Michigan. Then it was Bridewell in Chicago then Canyon City, then "big house" at Leavenworth, Kansas.

After that Hammond drifted to Seattle. He found a good job at more than living wages—and "fell" again. They caught him at St. Louis, brought him back and sent him to McNeil Island.

He has served his term and is back in the county jail charged with grand larceny.

If Hammond is found guilty, he may then be charged as an habitual criminal and "sent up" for life.

While Hammond was in the Island prison he says he "got religion."

The authorities doubt his sincerity. He wrote a letter to Thomas B. Foster, chief of the secret service here, declaring that he had, and asked Foster's aid in finding employment when his release day came.

In the same letter he made a complete confession of his long series of crimes, naming the penitentiaries in which he had been imprisoned. This was the information that is necessary to prove a man habitually a criminal, and Foster turned it over to the prosecuting attorney with the recommendation that Hammond be "habituated."

Imbler, 7.—(Special)—Miss Ethel Pearson was a guest of Mrs. John Witty Sunday.
