INTERIOR DESCRIBED

LA GRANDE PARTY KEEPS HOME FOLKS POSTED.

Mrs. W. H. Bohnenkamp interestingly Pictures Interior Trip. Interesting sidelights on the automobile trip through interior Oregon toward Crater lake, now being enjoyed by Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Bohnenkamp and Mr. and Mrs. E. Polack, are given to the Bohnenkamp folks remaining at home through letters from Mrs. W. H. Bohnenkamp. Writing from various points en route to the interior she gives a close-range view of roads and conditions as they are: Here are excerpts from her letters:

Ukiah, Aug. 4.—Left La Grande at 9 a. m. and by driving slowly to Pendleton, found the roads not so very bad. Rough but not as dusty as expected. From Pendleton we went to Nye, and then straight south to Canyon City.

From the top of the mountains saw I think, the most beautiful sunset I had ever seen. The atmosphere was slightly hazy and the sun was a copper-colored ball of glowing light, sinking behind the distant hills, and as the red light spread out we could see a higher peak back of it, and as we went into the timber it gleamed through like a distant timber fire. Have traveled 100 miles to get here and they tell us we are just 18 miles from Leyman Springs. The road from Nye was a splendid mountain road.

Read Signs Appreciated. John Day, Aug. 5.—Spent our first night out at Ukiah, a place of about 50 souls but found a good hotel and had a fine breakfast. The garage man has posted signs with the distances to Ukiah, for 25 miles in each direction and only those who have toured through a strange country will know how they are appreciated.

Feast at Crooked River. Prineville, Aug. 7.—In my last letter I said they were dredging in the John Day river, but found later it was Canyon creek. We stayed in John Day until 3 o'clock having our tires vulcanized and on leaving went up the road beside this canyon which in early days was placer mined for miles and now this big dredge is going to work over the creek bed. They have gravel piled higher than a house and as they work they head into new gravel.

The canyon road was a grand sight; steep, but a clean road. In Bear valley we ate our watermelon we had carried from home and later we put up for the night at a big stock ranch. Sunday we drove 101 miles and are now at Prineville. We at dinner yesterday on the Crooked river. The roads are very good and so far no dust. Central Oregon is certainly a vast territory with room for vast numbers of settlers still. One thing we see which does not appeal to us is a sign upon many gates "Positively no travelers kept here."

As houses are from 10 to 15 miles apart on the road and one might have trouble on the road it makes one feel that the old welcome spirit of the pioneer is surely a thing of the past. Last night we saw a magnificent sunset. It was cloudy and the sun sank in silver and rose and gray with high mountains looming in front. We leave at once for Bend which is but 35 miles from here.

MRS. BOHNENKAMP. British Peace. By Ed L. Keen. London, July 12.—(By Mail)—This story has to run several hundred words so as to match up with Ackerman's, Simms', Wood's and Hearley's. Otherwise, it could be told in ten thus: England is ready for peace now—on her own terms.

She is just as ready as she was the day after war was declared. War weariness has not discouraged her. The awful drain of blood and money, the knowledge that every day's prolongation of the struggle means a bigger bill in both to pay, has not abated her zeal or released her determination to win what she went to war for. The military reverses of the last year have stiffened her purpose to accomplish a peace that will remove forever the "Menace of Prussian militarism."

Yes, there is a peace-at-any-rate party in England. But its members are negligible, its influence is nil. Some half-dozen of them are in Parliament because there has been no general election since war began. As proof of this, witness the special election in Merthyr Tydvil, South Wales, the red-hot socialist constituency in all Britain. Keir Hardie, ever a consistent peace advocate had represented Merthyr Tydvil in Commons for fifteen years. When he died his seat was contested by two members of the Labor party, Stanton and Winstone, the former a supporter of Britain's war, the latter a Hardis pacifist. Stanton had the nerve to tell the coal miners he was for continuing the war to the finish, even if it meant conscription twice over and they elected him by a vote of 10,236 to 6,080. If Morrell, Snowden, Trevelyan, Outhwaite, Pringle or Mason, all from far less radical constituencies, should stand for re-election, there can be little doubt as to the result.

The British public and its governmental servants don't always agree on great questions. There has been much popular dissatisfaction with the war cabinet. The diplomatic blunders whereby Bulgaria was lost and Germany enabled to overrun Serbia and Montenegro and involve the Entente in serious difficulties with Greece; the military miscalculations which resulted in the evacuation of Gallipoli and the surrender of General Townshend's forces at Kul-el Amara; the failure to exert a stronger economic pressure upon Germany by tightening the blockade; neglect to intern enemy aliens in England, etc.—on these matters sections of the public have expressed their opinions strongly.

On the question of peace, statesmen and common folk with the unimportant exception referred to, are one. There has been no criticism of the replies of Premier Asquith and Foreign Secretary Grey to Germany's peace overtures.

England is ready for peace on her own terms. England's terms are those of her Allies. The general principles for which she is fighting have been repeatedly stated. Only one of her specific terms which the Allies endorse has been laid down; that is the restoration of Belgium. The German Chancellor's recent tentative offer to create a new Belgium, not a Franco-English vessel, but between whose people and the Germans there should be the collaboration of neighbors, brought a prompt and specific response from the British Premier.

"We, the Allies, are determined to see once more the old Belgium. She must not be allowed to suffer permanently from the wanton and wicked invasion of her freedom. That which has been broken down must be repaired and restored." As for the other terms, Britishers feel that it would be futile to discuss them now. Here is what Sir Edward Grey says on this point:

"The first step toward peace will come when the German government begins to recognize the fact that the Allies are not beaten and are not going to be. The one thing that is more responsible than anything else for the prolongation of the war is that the Allies are already beaten. If any of the Allies have a special right to talk peace at this time it is France on whom for weeks past the concentrated fury of the German attack has fallen. But France is not talking peace.

"Under the relations governing the Allies we are bound not to put forth any terms of peace except in common agreement and after consultation with them." But these men are politicians. So listen to Arthur Henderson, Labor's member of the war cabinet:

"Who are the people most concerning themselves about peace negotiations, who apparently would accept a patched-up peace of any kind? They are the enemies of this nation abroad, who are boasting that the Allies have been conquered. They have been joined by a few mistaken people at home. "Against all such talk we must be on our guard. We must see that peace is founded upon justice and honor. In spite of all the suffering and the unparalleled sacrifices we have been called upon to make, I am convinced of the utter futility and actual danger of peace talk at the present moment.

"We must guard against the danger of becoming weary and discouraged. The gallant soldier who recently found his death under such tragic circumstances warned us that it would be a war of from two to three years' duration. The end is not in sight. Let the enemy talk of our being a conquered people. We know different. "Our armies are stronger, better equipped, and in better spirits than ever before, the relations between ourselves and our Allies are more cordial, more closely cemented than they have ever been, and we are all of us more determined than ever."

Henderson represents a class of population that has contributed four-fifths of the British army!

Humming Bird Murderer. Two canary birds of the Hart variety, were killed by a humming bird recently at Gladstone and the murderer was caught in the cage beside the victims. The humming bird was able to fly between the wires of the cage and attacked the canary birds with its long and pointed bill. The birds were valuable.

MEAT INJURIOUS TO THE KIDNEYS

Take a tablespoonful of Salts if Back hurts or Bladder bothers—Meat forms uric acid.

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.
