

Curing Constipation Nature's Way

The only effective way of treating constipation is to overcome the conditions which cause it. Nature has provided an oil, white, odorless and tasteless which will overcome constipation slowly but surely.

NEWLIN'S MINERAL OIL

will cure you by a natural method. It acts as an intestinal lubricant and does not upset the system like quick-acting laxatives. Results will also be more lasting. Constipation means the re-absorption of effete matter and the poisoning of the entire system.

BROOKS CLAN ENJOY BIRDS

ANNUAL CUSTOM GRAND EVENT THIS YEAR.
Twenty-one Seated About Table on Which Lie 16 Young Grouse.

An unusual custom maintained by the Sam Brooks family at Imbler in the nature of a grouse hunt and picnic dinner, was held Tuesday at which were assembled 21 people and that it was a grand affair everyone will vouch for. Each year when the grouse season opens, Sam Brooks, a venerable pioneer citizen of the county, invites in his immediate family and a few special friends—the men go grouse hunting and bring home their game to their wives who cook up a feast fit for kings and potentates and then all are seated at the festal table. They make a day of it always and they did so this year too. Five guns were in the hunt and each got the limit. The genial host himself followed the sportsmen over the hunting grounds with no seeming distress.

Ed Tuttle of Imbler supplied the comedy of the day, it is said, by his apparent "slipping" nimrod cook. Anyway soon after 1 o'clock the hunters were back and 16 juicy young grouse were in the frying pan, spluttering away in fine style. When done to a queen's taste, the hostesses bade all be seated to a feast none of them will soon forget. Among those who participated were:

Homer Bidwell, wife and children; Harley Laughlin and family all of North Powder; Hugh Hiron and wife of Imbler, Ed Tuttle and family, Sam Brooks and wife, Miss Anna Brooks, and A. V. Andrews and wife of La Grande.

SEWER MEETS NO OBJECTION

CITY COMMISSION IN WEEKLY SESSION.

Numerous Matters Brought Before Administration For Action

No objection to construction of a short piece of sewer in the vicinity of Grandy avenue on the West side developed at the regular hour set for it at the meeting of the City commission last evening and it appears now that the sewer construction can proceed unhampered.

All members of the commission were in attendance last evening. Olive Slater and Mrs. Anson's petition to vacate portions of Third street was allowed with the understanding that the city be at no expense.

The question of water rates for the Elks' natatorium came up in conference with F. C. Bramwell, exalted ruler, but no action was taken of a final sort, postponement being decided upon.

A petition by B. C. Hamilton for a gasoline pump permit, the pump to be installed at 301 Fir street, was granted.

Fred J. Holmes, secretary of the La Grande Racing club was present and brought up the question of water rates for the races. It was agreed that an amicable settlement should be made after the races.

Smut Treatment Given

Smut, how to combat it, is the question uppermost in the minds of the wheat growers of the Northwest at the present time. Farmers have for years suffered heavy losses from this troublesome pest and have been greatly puzzled to know how to combat it. In spite of most careful treatment of seed, crops of winter wheat will very frequently appear with a large percentage of smut. Director Ira D. Cardiff states that investigations at the State Experiment Station at Pullman, prove conclusively that smut which infects wheat where seed has been carefully treated, comes very largely from smut pores which have been blown over the country in enormous numbers at threshing time.

Dr. Heald and his assistants have shown that during the threshing season there is not a square inch of surface out of doors that does not have deposited upon it, thousands of smut spores. These spores drop under the summer fallow where they lie until the fall rains come. It is a common agricultural practice, as soon as the rains come about October 1st, to disk the summer fallow and immediately seed the wheat. The disking turns under the smut spores where they germinate at the same time the wheat sprouts and immediately infects the latter thus resulting in a large percentage of smut in spite of the fact that the seed may have been carefully treated.

Therefore, wheat which is seeded before threshing time, will be free from this danger and produce practically a smut free crop. If early seeding is impossible, very late seeding is the next best practice and will result in very little smut as by this the smut spores which fell upon the surface during threshing time will have germinated and died.

Early seeding, however, is to be preferred for true winter wheats as it results in a more vigorous plant, one less apt to winter kill and also affords a large amount of pasture. It has been proven by investigations at the Station, that if wheat is sown in October upon summer fallow which has been replowed, little or no smut will be produced. The replowing turns the smut spores from the surface deep into the soil, with the result that when wheat and smut germinate, they are not in contact and infection does not occur.

Best of all the entire abandonment of summer fallow practice would eliminate very largely the danger from smut.

There is little or no difference in the value of different methods of seed treatment, formaldehyde being as effective as bluestone (copper sulphate).

Golf Championship Battle Begins.

Milwaukee, Aug. 17.—The Western Open Golf Championship tournament began at the Blue Mound country club here today between leading professionals of the country. Tom McNamara of Boston, present holder of the title, will defend his laurels. Jack Hutchinson of Pittsburg, the pro who won the prize money in the National Open tournament at Minneapolis this year, also is at the meet. Other players from the eastern district are: Walter C. Hagen of Rochester, N. Y., former holder of the national open championship honors; George Sargent of Washington, D. C., and Michael Brady of Wallaston, Mass., who recently won the Massachusetts open title after the play off of a tie with Pat Doyle. The leading golfers of the Chicago district also are on hand and ready for the big event.

Auto Party Returns

Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Fiske have returned from an extended auto tour taking them to Lakeview and Crater Lake, and many Eastern Oregon counties. They report a fine trip, notwithstanding numerous car troubles on the way.

Tuxedo Fans by Walt Mason

Tuxedo fans are always loyal to that one brand, superb and royal. They say, "What is the use of trying the other kinds, and sample buying? We know Tuxedo can't be beaten; it's good as bread, when bread is wheat; it keeps us all in cheerful humor, and makes of each an ardent boomer; it with a blissful peace annoys us; Tuxedo never disappoints us. It is the worker's one consoler, when Business, with its big steam roller, has run him down and left him jaded, with all his dreams and prospects faded. 'Tis then Tuxedo smooths the wrinkles, and to his sad eyes brings the twinkles, and braces him for future battles, down where the loom of commerce rattles." These fans are found in every station, in every trade and occupation; the able jurist and the baker, the boss of many a rolling acre, the butcher, as he sells his rasher, the banker and the haberdasher, the cattelman in far Laredo, all pin their faith to good Tuxedo.

American Express Will Add New Man to Its Present Force.

After looking over the field in person, G. B. Viets, superintendent of the American Express company for this district, this morning empowered Agent Black at this point to add another man to the force, making five all told. The new man will be night transfer man, and provides a cashier, a clerk, a driver and night transfer man in addition to the agent. The business is reported to have grown so rapidly of late that it was found an absolute necessity to have the additional man and Agent Black will employ such help immediately.

public undertaking of that fine quality.

"I rejoice to come here as a representative of the reunited Republican party. It is a party reunited because the great aims we have in view are so lofty that they transcend all possibilities of a difference. We have a conception of paramount National needs. We are here as an historic party once more restored to efficiency to be an instrument of National service, and I am glad to be the spokesman of the party, not only reunited but reconsecrated to its ideals and traditions.

"We have occasion at this time to think of the imperative demands of a new period in the world's history. This 20th century is not to be like the centuries that have passed. Europe is finding itself in the midst of an awful conflict. America must find itself if it shall permanently prosper and vindicate free institutions when it faces in commercial rivalry a new Europe.

"You must not suppose we are to have an easy time in this country after the European war ends. We are to have one of the most difficult periods in our history, because of the severity of the competition which we are then sure to meet. But, before I speak of that, I want to speak of some of the fundamental concerns which should engage our attention. We came into this hall tonight to the air of our National anthem. We never hear it, but we are inspired with patriotism. Do you reflect what that flag means? It does not mean mere wealth of resources. It does not mean merely an admirable constitution system; it means fundamental and human brotherhood organized for the purpose of bettering human life. If we are to conserve our prosperity and assure our future we must take account of the fundamental necessities of our progress. There are some who think of America divided into classes. There are some who think of America as a place of agitation—of conflict between classes. Of course, there will always be contests and there will always be differences of opinion; but if I thought that America meant a war of classes and a clash of interests, I should despair of the future of America. We have here no concern of labor as distinguished from the concerns of capital; we have no concern of capital as distinguished from the concerns of labor. We have a great co-operative enterprise; and if we are to succeed we must recognize not simply for the purpose of economic efficiency, but with deference to the ideals of brotherhood, that we are fellow workingmen, and insist upon common justice to all concerned.

on common justice to all concerned.

"We must get over the idea that it is impossible to adjust matters that concern real grievances. Any real grievance can be adjusted by a calm, patient and resolute examination of the facts. There is nothing so serious that it cannot be composed if we are desirous of doing the right thing and are willing to take account of the facts as they exist.

"We must have in this country, if we are to succeed prosperity, protection for our women and protection for our children.

"We must have a long look ahead. It is not a question of the next ten years or the next 25 years; it is a question of the policy which will make us and keep us a great people according to our ambitions. We must protect the future of the race by protecting our children throughout this land from exploitation. We must advance every possible means of education. We must have more vocational training than we have hitherto had. We must have opportunities for refreshment and recreation; because America cannot succeed unless America is reasonably contented. The American workingman must feel that in prosecuting his daily work he is a faithful friend of the country in furnishing productive enterprise."
