Sporting News

New York, Sept. 28.—Campfire, Richard T. Wilson's great two-year-old colt, which started nine times in the 1916 racing season in New York, was the most consistent winner on the big tracks in the state. Out of his nine trips to the barrier he finished in the lead six times. Wilson was the biggest winning owner of the season and his winnings came for the most part from his wonderful colt's efforts. Among Campfire's victories were the $17,340 Futurity, the $18,850 Hopeful, the $2,850 Sanford Memorial, the $4,625 Saratoga Special, and the Great American, which netted $3,900. Campfire won, all told, approximately, $48,000. In addition to six firsts the colt twice was second, and once came in unplaced. In the latter place the youngster got away to so bad a start that his rider admitted he trailed, knowing it to be useless to attempt overhauling the field. The record of Friar Rock, the 3-year-old recently sold by August Belmont to John T. Madden for $50,000, places him first among the season's 3-year-olds. His greatest accomplishment was winning the Saratoga Cup from the Finn and Roamer. He made racing history in winning the Brooklyn Handicap, the Suburban handicap, and the Belmont handicap, something rare for a 3-year-old. He undoubtedly would have won the Realization stakes had he been allowed to start, but his new owner decided to retire him to the stud without running the risk of injuries in what would have been his final race.

ranged at each of the meets, for in Simpson Murray and Loomis the Europeans will have the opportunity of seeing the world's best slight takers. Competition between Murray and Simpson, especially, should prove highly interesting. Roy Corhan, a brilliant fielder, but like a great many shortstops, a poor hitter in the major leagues, has been released by Miller Huggins to the San Francisco Coast League club. Corhan has been a steady hitter in coast league circles. The Wichita franchise in the Western league has been turned over to Colorado Springs, which has wanted a franchise in the circuit for many years. When Dan Costello was released to an International league club by Manager Jimmy Callahan of the Pirates he announced his intention of retiring from baseball. He was a sworn friend of Al Mamux and was suspended at the same time Mamux was put on the disgraced list by Callahan.

searching for the actual wardrobe of an Italian grave-digger for my characterization in "The Allen." It took me quite a little time and necessitated the assistance of a bootblack as interpreter before I obtained what I was after. By buying a coat from one laborer, a pair of shoes from another, a hat and overalls from still another, together with such incidentals which were nevertheless essential as a handkerchief and unique jack-knife and a soiled bandanna handkerchief, I finally had my outfit for the character. Instead of calling on the costumer's for my material I went right among the laborers working on an excavation. It was no easy matter to convince the laborers that I was perfectly sane, and when they finally did realize this, the price for their respective garments soared above par. However, the result readily warranted my trials and tribulations in this direction, as will be attested by many thousands who have seen this photograph.

HAPPINESS FOR PUPILS SOUGHT

New York, Sept. 29.—The opening of the school year in New York will witness the introduction of a system of health and hygiene instruction for children under the direction of the Department of Physical Training Hygiene and Athletics of the public schools. New York school officials declare that "school days may be made the most healthful and happy of all life." In order to accomplish this, herculean efforts will be made to eliminate all health-depressing influences of school life. Among the essentials is to place children in seats that are fitted for them; proper ventilation, and cleanliness. Daily inspection in hygienic conditions will be made by teachers at the opening of school each morning, and special attention will be given to symptoms of infectious diseases. The cooperation of parents will be sought, and the latter will receive pamphlets and instructions regarding the safeguarding of the health of the child; and the children will be taught lessons of health and hygiene in the school. Dr. Crampton, Director of this line of work, has issued suggestions to children and teachers, recommending

The Art of Making Up

By GEORGE BEBAN

THE real art of "making-up" for the camera is not attained by merely ordering a suit from the costumer and getting busy with the cosmetic box. To fulfill the proper portrayal of a character one must primarily look the part. In order to actually look the part one can hardly expect to obtain the best results by driving up to Cohen's or any other costumer in an endeavor to buy something as near like the original as possible. The real effect can only be obtained by securing the original.

This is not always an easy matter, and often requires a little time and patience, to say nothing of diplomatic prowess. For instance, in searching for the actual wardrobe of an Italian grave-digger for my characterization in "The Allen." It took me quite a little time and necessitated the assistance of a bootblack as interpreter before I obtained what I was after. By buying a coat from one laborer, a pair of shoes from another, a hat and overalls from still another, together with such incidentals which were nevertheless essential as a handkerchief and unique jack-knife and a soiled bandanna handkerchief, I finally had my outfit for the character. Instead of calling on the costumer's for my material I went right among the laborers working on an excavation. It was no easy matter to convince the laborers that I was perfectly sane, and when they finally did realize this, the price for their respective garments soared above par. However, the result readily warranted my trials and tribulations in this direction, as will be attested by many thousands who have seen this photograph.

As to facial make-up for the camera, I do not believe in it except where it is absolutely necessary. When my parts demand a sunburned complexion, I go out into the fields and let nature do it, if this is possible. If a shaggy beard is necessary I forget to shave for a few days. Satisfying up the entire question of make-up for the screen, the same rules that govern success in real life apply, namely: Be natural and avoid the artificial as much as possible.

that they should rise promptly; take breathing and sitting-up exercises; eat slowly and chew well; care for their own clothing, desks, etc.; keep correct sitting and standing posture; drink plenty of water; be careful to use individual drinking cups or the bubble fountain; play in the fresh air; retire regularly. He also lays particular emphasis upon the necessity of properly washing the face, neck, hands and chest. A cold splash on the face and body, is recommended. Clean finger nails are required; likewise clean teeth, and cleanliness in everything either in the school or home. Physical exercises and athletics are also included in the plan.

Texas is nearer to New York than is Pittsburg, according to the transportation rates on pig iron submitted to the Board of Industrial Preparedness in a presentation of the proposed use of Texas iron ores on a big scale for relieving the stress of orders for iron and steel, which have sent "steel common" across par on the stock exchange. Not that the immortal hero of the "Texas Steer" will have a shorter journey to Gotham from Texas City, the "new steel city" on the Gulf, and from Amarillo in the Panhandle, than from the smoke of Pittsburg. But freight rates by water on pig iron, it seems, are even lower from the Texas port to New York than are the rail rates from Pittsburg. And the freight on iron ore from the famous Messaba mines, in which James J. Hill made many associates fabulous fortunes, to Pittsburg furnaces is much higher. The comparison made in a report of a big New York engineering house was as follows: "The freight on ore from the mines to the furnace and steel plant and the product of the plant to the commercial centers is one big item in the cost of production. The freight on ore to Texas City is only $1.75 per ton compared to $5 per ton to Pittsburg, the greatest producing center in the world. Texas City is nearer New York than is Pittsburg when the cost per ton of freight charges is considered. Engineers' reports show that pig iron can be produced at Texas City for $9 per ton. The selling price of pig iron September 1st, 1916 was $22 per ton. It only takes two tons of Texas ore to produce one ton of pig iron." For years the great iron ores of Texas have been an ever present regulator of the price at which the Northern ores are sold, but with the giant steel industry earning a million dollars a day and refusing orders, the situation is said to require development and use of the Texas area. The market in Texas alone for rails and fencing is so great that big warehouses are maintained by the steel corporation for distribution to the interior of the enormous state of Texas.

A respectable looking stranger, wrapped in a clerical atmosphere, justified his state of inebriety at a New York police station, by declaring that in First Timothy, fifth chapter and twenty-third verse, the advice was given "to use a little wine for thy stomach's sake." The man brought forth a Bible from his inside pocket, and attempted to prove by it that the police had outraged him in the pursuit of his happiness. The police captain scratched his head, and finally beat the prisoner at his own form of argument; "You may be all right declared the officer, "but if my nose serves correctly, you have been drinking beer. There is nothing in the Bible that justifies getting soused on beer—now is there? The bibulous policeman was right; whereupon the latter declared to the disturber of the rules of the street, "The coop's the place for you." He suited his action to his words, and the man with the Bible had all right to think up a new line of argument to present to the police court the following morning.

Harding Will Speak in West.

Chicago, Sept. 27.—Senator Harding of Ohio will begin a speaking trip through the west in behalf of Hughes on the first of October. His itinerary includes Idaho. Senator Brady, National Committeeman Hart and State Chairman Evans of Idaho visited the western Republican headquarters today and reported that while the Democrats are making an aggressive fight there, prospects of Republican successes are exceptionally good.
