Picked Up By The Stroller

The Stroller sympathizes with Mr. and Mrs. Edlfsen who were lost on Mt. Hood for two days. He slept out all night on Mt. Hood once in a sleeping bag and almost froze.

H. L. Pittock is not noted as a loquacious man. Once he talked himself out of some money.

One day in the sixties Mr. Pittock started the Daily Oregonian. Jacob Kamm walked into his office. "How much will it cost me to get the Daily down at Hot Springs?" "He asked Mr. Pittock, who in those days was in the front office.

"Five dollars for three months." (How we wish those days were still here.)

"Will I be sure to get it?" queried Kamm. "How do I know I will get it?"

"Why, W. S. Ladd is down at Hot Springs," said Mr. Pittock and he gets his alright."

"Oh," said Kamm, "if Ladd's getting the paper down there I'll read his copy."

He put his purse in his pocket and walked out.

Charged With Threat to Kill.

The case of the State vs. Harry E. Canfield was called up for preliminary examination before Justice of the Peace Williams this afternoon at 2:30. The complaining witness for the state is Geo. A. Chadwick and the trouble is over a lease on land in the Mt. Glen district. The charge comes under a new statute which heretofore had provided for placing defendants, where sufficient proof is adduced, under bonds to "keep the peace." The new provision is for holding for grand jury investigation those whom the evidence has sufficiently indicated to be guilty of making threats to kill.

Dr. Gillilan in the City

Dr. J. D. Gillilan, district superintendent for the Boise Methodist district, was in La Grande today presiding at the Edna Brakenridge funeral, and incidentally meeting his old-time neighbors, who, invariably, delight in having the genial gentleman call upon them when he drops into the city.
