PROGRESSIVE BACKS HUGHES

SPRINGFIELD, ORE., CITIZENS HEAR CAMPAIGN SPEECH AT RALLY.

Record of Governor Hughes Reviewed in Speech by Hon. A. E. Clarke of Portland.

Springfield, Ore., Oct. 3.—(Special)—The division of 1912 and since now happily ended may be likened to a time when partners in a great civic enterprise were estranged," said Hon. A. E. Clarke of Portland, candidate of the Progressive party for United States Senator in 1912, in a speech here last evening before an enthusiastic audience, at a Hughes rally held under the auspices of the Hughes-Fairbanks Republican club.

"During the period of estrangement," continued Mr. Clarke, "the affairs of our country have suffered. But new conditions have arisen; new issues now confront us. They grow out of an economic policy that has paralyzed the industries of this section; that laid prostrate the industries of the middle west and of the east, until temporarily relieved by the abnormal and transient conditions of war. They spring from futile diplomacy that has severed almost every tie of international friendship; isolated us, unprepared, in a world where the spirit of Caesar is again rampant; that has surrendered American rights in the Canal Zone and elsewhere, and has repudiated the obligation to protect our citizens either within or without our borders. We have been brought together by the needs and the opportunity of the present time. The differences of the past should be forgotten; personal rancor and partisan prejudice should be laid aside; and we should now unite in proclaiming our support of a leadership, and of national policies, better calculated to insure peace and prosperity at home, honor and respect abroad, and to secure to our citizens protection for their lives and their property upon foreign soil, along our borders and upon the highways of the sea."

The record of Chas. E. Hughes as governor of New York was sketched by the speaker, who said in part:

"Next November we are going to elect a president of the United States. We are going to do more; we are going to elect the future of this country for a generation or more to come. Not since the days of Lincoln have the needs of the nation been greater, the issues to be decided more vital. Does Mr. Hughes measure up the demands of the time. This is answered by saying that his whole career has been one of true progress, constructive work; a struggle for civic righteousness, and for efficiency in the public service. Before taking public office he rendered signal service to the people of his state, and indeed to the nation."

4 will refer to a few things he did." Mr. Clark then told of the services of Mr. Hughes in connection with investigation of the Gas companies of New York; spoke of his splendid work as Counsel for the Armstrong Insurance Commission, which he said "evoked the praise of the whole country, and laid the foundation for legislation of a highly beneficial character, not only in New York, but in almost every state in the Union."

The speaker then reviewed Hughes's attitude toward labor, characterizing the same as unique and unsurpassed both in the number of laws enacted and in the beneficent results achieved. On this topic Mr. Clark said in part:

"It is a record unequalled in the history of any other state, and in the face of it no one, save a demagogue, or perhaps a democratic campaign orator, would say that Mr. Hughes is unfriendly to labor. At every step he was fought by special interests, by entrenched privileges; by republican bosses like Barnes, and democratic bosses like Murphy, and 'Fingy' O'Connor. They joined hands in common cause against him, because he was regarded by them as a common enemy, who was ruthlessly destroying their ancient and profitable pursuits, depriving dishonestly, graft and corruption of their traditional respectability, and driving them from public places."

The speaker also discussed the Mexican situation, the disastrous effect of democratic policies on the business of the country and President Wilson's change of front on nearly every issue of importance to the country.

Pendleton Is Pleased.

Pendleton, Or., Oct. 2.—(Special)—Pendleton merchants report that the crowd which attended the 1916 Round-Up spent twice as much money as they did last year. One clothing merchant says that the business of last week will make his September receipts this year double that of last year.

While it is difficult to estimate the amount of money left here during the week, the figures run into hundreds of thousands of dollars.

FATIMA may never become the only cigarette smoked by keen, substantial men of this type. But Fatima has already become more popular with such men than almost any other cigarette.

This is because men who smoke wisely want a SENSIBLE cigarette—a cigarette that is comfortable to the tongue and throat and that leaves a man feeling "fit" and clear-headed even after smoking more often than usual. You should try Fatimas.
