Sixteen men and Coach Niles left this morning for Walla Walla to play the high school there tomorrow. At Pendleton this afternoon the team limbered up in stiff signal practice on the Pendleton field and tonight at Walla Walla a chalk talk will be given by Mr. Niles. The special stress of signal drill is due because of the short time the team has had to round itself into shape since beginning training this fall.

The ones who made the trip include Captain Moon, who is in good physical condition again; Eugene Moon, guard, Andrews, end, Carroll and Engle, subs, Chenault tackle, Moss tackle, McDonald, full, Forbes, guard, Larsen, end, Johnson, half, Roberts, half, Taylor, end, Millering, center, Reynolds, quarter, Woods, g.

All are in good shape for a game battle. Chuck Reynolds, former coach, leaves tonight for Walla Walla to referee the big game tomorrow afternoon.

WORLD SERIES GOSSIP.

Frank Baker, formerly with the Athletics, but now with the Yankees, gained the title of "Home-run Baker" when he hit two home runs in the world's series of 1911. His batting average for the series was .375.

Catcher Gowdy of the Boston Braves piled up the remarkable batting average of .545 in the series of 1914, which the Braves won from the Athletics. His hitting was the biggest factor in Boston's victory.

Rudolph and James, pitching for Boston in the 1914 world's series, each won two games from the Philadelphia Athletics.

Ty Cobb's batting average in the world's series of 1907 was only .290. In the series of 1908 he had an average of .368. In the series of 1909 against Pittsburgh his average was but .231.

Babe Adams, Pittsburgh pitcher, leaped to fame in 1909 when he won three games from Detroit, virtually pitching the Pirates to world's championship.

Frank Isbell made four two-base hits and scored three runs in the world's series game of Oct. 13, 1906 between the White Sox and Cubs.

The White Sox hold the record for errors in a world's series game. They made six in one game against the Cubs in 1906, but won, 3 to 0.

Athletes Are Frowned On. Cleburne, Tex., Oct. 5.—This is going to be a hard winter for the domineering athletes in this city. Devotees of the strenuous pastime have been staging their exciting contests in the jury rooms of the courthouse. John Robertson and Will Green, janitors, got dog-goned tired of sweeping up after them, so they locked all the jury rooms and hid the keys. The county commissioners' court then stepped in and passed an order forbidding domino playing and all other sports in the courthouse, b'gosh.

Death of E. E. Coovert (The Oregonian)

By the death of E. E. Coovert Portland loses a citizen who had done much valuable work for the city and state's advancement. His principal public work was done as S. Benson's legal adviser in supporting the plan for construction of the Columbia River Highway, on which Mr. Benson had set his heart. That unrivaled road will be a monument to Mr. Coovert as well as to Mr. Benson, who did much to bring it about, and to Mr. Yeon, who supervised its construction. Had Mr. Coovert lived and been elected to the State Senate, he would doubtless have assisted materially in modifying the road laws. He could ill be spared at an age when he was in full vigor and at a time when he was rendering such aid to the state's development.

POLITICIANS MUST BE QUIET.

Ohio Town Prevents Chatter Which Interfered with Quietness. Cleves, O., Oct. 5.—So voluminous, loud and pointless was the political chatter on the streets after dark, that the City Dads, to protect the sacred rights of the sleepers, felt called upon to prevent the chatter. Their remedy works. It is now a misdemeanor for three persons to gather in one place on the streets after dark. And as the penalty is $50 chances for gathering and arguing are slim.

WOMAN SELLS GUN TO THE BRITISH

Mrs. Stanton has just returned from England where she sold to the British government a centrifugal gun for which she stood sponsor. The weapon is operated without powder, is noiseless and smokeless. Mrs. Stanton learned of the death of her husband when she returned.

When Editors Were Doctors.

Keene's Bath Journal was one of the oldest weekly newspapers in the province. Known as the Bath Journal, it was founded in 1742 by Thomas Roddeley, whose portrait in wig and ruffles, by Hoare, forms a picturesque reminder of the period. His daughter married John Keene, the journal from this union passing on to and through a succession of Keenes; hence its title Keene's Bath Journal.

As was the custom in bygone days patent medicines were sold in provincial newspaper offices, and the drawers in which the pills and medicines were kept at the Journal office were there until the paper suspended. It was nothing unusual for the editor in the throes of writing his editorials to have to step down from his seat to serve a box of pills.

The pages of the Journal were for a long period largely taken up by advertisements of various "cure alls," London Times.

Arsenic In the Hair.

New light has been thrown on the legal side of arsenic poisoning. It has been found that arsenic compounds are absorbed by the hair of living persons, though not absorbed after death. In the hair of man arsenic has been known to reach a concentration of one to five parts in 100,000. The deposit takes place in the hair after it has been absorbed by the abdominal organs—liver and kidneys in particular. Therefore, in case of acute, quick poisoning, a chemical analysis of the hair would show no arsenic, while it would be found in the liver and kidneys. On the other hand, if slow arsenic poisoning was suspected, analysis would show arsenic in the hair, but not in the liver and kidneys, and it could safely be assumed that the poisoning was not recent. The legal value of such evidence is apparent.—Scientific American.

The Stork's Lazy House Building.

The most interesting sight in the Rotterdam zoo was the stork, whose nest is set high on a pinnacle of the buffalo house. He was building in the leisurely style of the British workman. He would negligently descend from the heavens with a stick. This he would lay on the fabric and then carefully perform his toilet, looking around and down all the time to see that every one else was busy. When ever his eye lighted on a toddling child or a perambulator it visibly brightened. "My true work" he seemed to say. "This nest building is mere by-paths of industry." After drinking and overlooking and congratulating himself thus for a few minutes he would stroll off over the rooftops for another stick. He was unquestionably a king of the garden.—Lucas in "A Wanderer in Holland."

Her Only Criticism.

Little Dorothy not only liked her tea and coffee to have the appearance of being "real and truly," but she also liked to taste the flavor of each. One afternoon her mother took her to a friend's home, where tea was served at 5 o'clock.

The hostess gave to Dorothy what she usually gave to her own children, of Dorothy's age—viz, hot water, sugar and milk. Dorothy tasted hers politely and ate her little cakes.

"Why, Dorothy, you aren't drinking your tea, dear. Isn't it sweet enough?" asked the hostess.

"Yes, Mrs. C., it's sweet enough," replied the child.

"Then why aren't you taking it?" "It's too dull," she replied. — New York Times.

George's Birthday.

The date of Washington's birthday was, according to the calendar at the time of his birth, Feb. 11. This became Feb. 22 when the Gregorian calendar was adopted in 1752. The first place to use the new date in celebrating the event is said to have been Newport, R. I. As late as 1788 Washington himself apparently used the old style in referring to his birthday. His diary for that year has this entry: "Feb. 11 went up to Alexandria to the celebration of my birthday. Many maneuvers were performed by uniform corps and an elegant ball and supper at night."

Expressiveness.

"How is your boy Reub getting along with his books?"

"First rate," replied Farmer Alf Alfa. "He's learned a whole lot."

"Knows more than you do, I bet."

"I won't say that. But he kin tell me a lot of the things I already know in language I can't understand."—San Francisco Call.

He Beat Her to It.

"Belle, are you going to marry that pinhead you were with at the dance last night?"

"Yes, if he doesn't change his mind."

"Don't be too certain about it. He changed it about me, but I was about to do the same thing about him."—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Natural Instincts.

"That callow youth acts as if the world depended on his choice of clothes."

"Well, in his salad days it is perfectly natural for a man to be particular about his dressing."—Baltimore American.

Different Classes.

"I fear she's too high for me."

"Different walks of life, eh?"

"Not walks exactly. But she's in the blouses class, and I'm only in the runabout."—Pittsburgh Post.

Decision of character will often give an inferior mind command over a superior.—Wirt.

INDIVIDUALS GIVEN LESSONS

EXTENSION WORK GLAD TO TAKE UP SPECIAL DISCUSSION AND LECTURES.

Salesmanship Classes Branch Out to Get Greatest Possible Benefits to All Concerned.

As a variation of the program in the salesmanship course now being conducted by the extension department of the University of Oregon Professor G. R. McAuslan held a conference with several members of his class who are anxious to secure personal advancement in this profession.

He will welcome the opportunity to do the same for any one interested in developing themselves along business lines. The University of Oregon whom he represents is anxious to get near to the people of the state in a real practical way and this short course in salesmanship is the first attempt the University has made to develop a state wide interest in better methods in business affairs.

Beginning Monday and continuing till Friday the lectures will be of great interest to all people whether they sell goods or act as buyers, as sooner or later all people do.

The subject for the week will be "The Fundamentals of Fabrics, Cotton, Linen, Wool and Silk" being treated together with a lecture on the knitting process. Samples of the fibres in various stages of completion will be shown and by charts and pictures the development from a raw film to a finished article will be explained.

Prize-Winning Flock Bought

J. E. Reynolds Obtains Valuable Imported Ram to Head 60 Shropshires for His Ranch.

Sixty head of prize-winning Shropshire sheep bred and raised by the state's foremost Shropshire breeder, Frank Brown, will arrive in La Grande next Saturday. J. E. Reynolds personally visited the Brown farm and was so impressed with the quality of the herd that he purchased 60 head. While he is not an extensive raiser of sheep, Mr. Reynolds feels it is a side line with merit and determined to obtain the best foundation for his flocks possible.

SLAIN BY CIRCUS ELEPHANT.

Throng of Spectators See Walter Eldridge Killed.

Kingsport, Tenn., Oct. 1.—Walter Eldridge, an animal trainer with Spark's Circus, was killed by "Mary," an elephant, at the close of the performance here. Infuriated when struck on the head with a stick, the animal suddenly coiled her trunk about Eldridge and in the presence of a throng of spectators lifted him high in the air, then dashed him to the ground.

"Mary" then pinned Eldridge to the earth and drove her tusks through his body. Men with revolvers rushed to the rescue and a dozen shots were fired into the elephant's body but apparently without effect except to add to the fury of the beast. In the night's performance "Mary" was perfectly calm.
