Suffragists Tell Tales on Candidates.

New York, Oct. 7.—This is the day the candidate for congress who has not promised to vote to submit the Sussan B. Anthony Federal Suffrage Constitutional amendment will be heralded to the nation for what the women say he is—an "anti".

At the urging of the National Women's Suffrage association local organizations all over the country are today holding meetings at which the qualifications of each candidate with direct reference to his suffrage views is reviewed.

Those who listen to the speakers will be urged to support the candidates who are favorable to suffrage through Federal action. All speaking will be strictly non-partisan.

Today's action, however, is not final. The suffragists intend having another nation-wide group of meetings October 21. All of the candidates non-committal or anti-suffrage thus far, will be visited by committee-women between today and October 21. Any change of mind they may experience will be told of on the twenty-first.

Speeches on all phases of suffrage will also be made.

SHORT TIME FARM LOANS

Every farmer before borrowing money should ask himself certain questions, according to Bulletin No. 409, Factors Affecting Interest Rates and Other Charges on Short-Time Farm loans, recently published by the department. Very often the farmer who does not ask himself these questions may find that the banker will require answers before he makes the loan.

"As the importance of promoting and encouraging improved systems of farming becomes increasingly apparent," to quote the bulletin, "attention will be directed more and more towards such questions as the purpose and size of farm loans. How are the proceeds of a proposed loan to be employed? Are they to be expended for a productive purpose, such as would lead to improvement in the farming business? Is the size of the loan adapted to the purpose in view? Does the period for which the loan is to run conform to the time the capital is actually needed? All of these questions have a direct bearing on the costs of short-time farm loans.

"The use of any given loan ought to yield a return sufficient at least to repay both interest and principal. If the returns are not sufficient for this purpose, then the money should not be borrowed. The only way in which the use of credit can be directed so as to serve the interests of improved agriculture is to control the extension of loans so that they may be used for productive purposes only. This means, at the same time, a safer use of credit.

"In some localities banks offer loans to farmers at reduced rates of interest when the money borrowed is used for some specific and approved purpose, such as the purchase of livestock, the building of silos, or the making of other improvements which will make farming more profitable under the given conditions.

"The banker usually charges a higher rate of interest on a small loan than on a large one. The clerical and bookkeeping expenses are the same in both cases. Unless a higher rate were charged on small loans, the point would be reached where the expenses connected with such a loan would be greater than the interest.

"The importance of restricting loans to those for approved productive purposes and of having the size of the loan conform to the requirements of sound farm investments has been recognized by some bankers to such an extent that they employ advisers who discuss such questions with their farmer patrons in order to promote the interests of their farm-loan business. This plan has been followed by banks in the Central West, in New England, and in the South.

The plan of one of the banks may be taken as an example. The agricultural adviser employed by this bank, after a conference with the prospective borrower, decides whether the proposed loan is businesslike and expedient. If the purpose of the loan meets with his approval he works out a plan of procedure with the farmer. The farmer may consider that he needs a loan of $1,000. As a result of his conference with the adviser it may be found that $700 is sufficient. They discuss the safety of the proposed investment, the additional equipment necessary, and, in case live stock is to be purchased, the crop rotation that will furnish the most economical supply of feed. These items are all arranged and agreed upon before the bank makes the loan. After the loan has been made and the capital invested it is the duty of the adviser to visit the farm from time to time to see if the plan adopted is adhered to and if the investment is yielding proper results. Such a plan means added protection to both the farmer and the banker."

October is proving high living month. Creamery butter for instance is 85 cents a roll instead of 75 cents; Another increase has hit flour; the best one can buy sugar for now is $8.20 and if credit is taken, 40 cents more than that. So on down the list of necessities—the prices incline upward except for sweet potatoes which are a trifle cheaper.

SCENE FROM "THE WHEEL OF THE LAW"

Emily Stevens, the famous stage and screen star, will be the feature attraction at the Sherry theatre last day in "The Wheel of the Law," a sensational five-part Metro wonderplay. The story has to do with the injustice of convictions obtained on circumstantial evidence alone by officials who have political aspirations, and who are often prompted by their ambition to be relentless in their prosecutions. Miss Stevens is surrounded by an exceptionally strong cast which includes the well known dramatic artist, Frank Mills, who is featured with the star.

Miss Stevens has been starred in several of the greatest features ever produced by Metro including "The House of Tears," "Destiny, or the Soul of a Woman," and "Cora." There are scores of big and gripping scenes in "The Wheel of the Law," including a realistic courtroom scene, an elaborate church wedding, a scene from "La Loca," and glimpses behind the scenes in the life of a Broadway stage star. George D. Baker directed this masterly production.
