

HAISTEN'S PATENT HEATER

SOMETHING NEW— SOMETHING DIFFERENT IN A HEATER.

There is merit in the excellence of construction, material used, beauty of line and symmetry of proportion, together with the beautiful trimming that cannot be found in any other stove.

A Heater Supreme

A heater supreme. It burns any kind of fuel with first-class heating results. Its single draft so built as not to let any cold air get to the fire is the secret.

A super-heating expansion air reservoir and an automatic draft that adjusts itself to the condition of fires make up a heater that is second to none.

(It Burns Even the Smoke)

I have so much faith in this splendid heater that I will place it in your home on 30 days' trial

Boston Light.

Boston Light, which celebrated its two hundredth anniversary on September 14, was the first lighthouse built in America, and is one of the most important in the North Atlantic. In the days of the old windjammer, the sailor beating his way across tempestuous Massachusetts Bay or running before a driving storm looked longingly for the white column by day and the great light by night, for he knew that beyond the light lay the safe channel.

The first light was kindled Friday, September 14, 1716, by George Worthyake, who with his wife and daughter, was shortly afterward drowned. In this early day the light-keeper was also health officer of the port, and his duties included the piloting of vessels in the harbor and the saving of life. The first lighthouse was burned and rebuilt again in 1720. The lighthouse and other buildings were again burned and rebuilt in 1761. In 1776 the British, driven from Boston by Washington's victorious army, destroyed the lighthouse as they sailed away. It was rebuilt again by the State of Massachusetts in 1780. In 1790 the lighthouse was formally turned over to the Federal government. It stands on a rugged island, the outpost of the dangerous reef which made the entrance to Boston Harbor a precarious adventure before the light was established. In stormy weather the keepers are often marooned on the island for days at a time, and when the northeaster blows the waves frequently dash completely over the island and its buildings. The office of keeper is not a job for a faint heart, yet at present the little island apparently harbors two happy families. The present lighthouse is the same one that was built in 1870, although it has been once partly rebuilt.—The Christian Herald.

$3000 Given For A Suitable Name

La Grande Merchants Have Way of Enriching Person With An Idea in the Way of a Good Name.

Three thousand dollars for a name! Pretty good offer. But that's the truth. Several sporting goods and drug dealers of La Grande have taken up the Ever Ready method of what is known as a "Big Drive" in business—just such a thing as the war inaugurates every now and then. The Ever Ready Flash Light Co. is behind the offer for a donation of $3000 to the one who coins a word that best tells what the Ever Ready is. In the display windows of these various La Grande stores something is told about the scheme, but any one interested can get the blanks and all details by stepping inside and asking the proprietor.

The Big Drive in business is a new thing—a by-product of the war, and is being watched with interest. If you want to make $3000 in a jiffy here is the chance.

Hospital and College for Bend. Within a year Bend will have a modern hospital and an advanced Catholic academy and college. It was announced last week by Bishop C. J. O'Reilly of Baker, who was in the Central Oregon city to complete plans. He said that the Sisters of Charity will erect three buildings, one for the care of the sick and the others for school purposes, which will cost about $300,000. They will be operated under the name of Nazareth Literary and Benevolent Institution, and will be located on a 15-acre site, donated by W. D. Cheney, a prominent businessman of Bend.—The Spectator.

Modern Damon and Pythias Seen. BY HENRY WOOD.

Paris, Sept. 8.—(By Mail.)—Lieutenant Deullin and Lieutenant Hubert de la Tour, the Damon and Pythias of the French aviation service, have just suffered the bitter disappointment of failing to bring down together—as they had solemnly sworn they would do—their fifth German aviator. Less than twelve hours separated the individual exploits of the two friends, Deullin bringing down his fifth German on the evening of August 24 and De La Tour his fifth on the following morning, yet the interval of twelve hours broke the solemn compact which they had been able to maintain from their joint entrance into the French aviation service. To lessen a little their regret the French government officially announced the two exploits in the same communique but the aviators are firmly convinced that destiny has now intervened in their friendship. Deullin, who is only 28 years old entered the French aviation service on May 25, 1915 his license being No. 2078, which gives some idea of the number of aviators France has at her disposal. The two young aviators were thrown almost instantly together, and unlike Nungesser, who insists always on flying alone, they insisted on flying together. Their Damon and Pythias friendship was quickly cemented, when in the same flight each one brought down his first German aeroplane. Soon, there followed for each, the second German aeroplane, brought down in a joint flight, and then the third and then the fourth. By this time the two aviators had flown both at Verdun and at the Somme, and they had solemnly sworn that as in the past their next aviator would be brought down at the same time in a joint flight. Unfortunately on the evening of August 24 in one of their usual joint flights Deullin brought down his opponent while De La Tour's got away. Bitterly disappointed, the two men only waited until daylight the next morning before starting to retrieve their misfortune. In this flight they only succeeded in finding one German aviator whom Deullin generously left to his friend, and who lost no time in bringing him down. Their disappointment was slightly lessened but they frankly admit the fear they feel that their solemn compact can no longer be maintained.

There is only one thing that will reassure them and that is that the sixth aviator to be brought down by each will be brought down at the same time in a joint flight. Not only they, but the entire French aviation service is keenly awaiting the moment when this supreme test will come.

Candidates' Announcements.

For Assessor. I have been regularly nominated on the Democratic ticket for County Assessor. If I am elected I pledge myself to a fair assessment. I believe the burdens should be fairly divided. Ease and comfort of motion—unconsciousness of any restraint—permit this freedom, this joy and zest which gives true expression to beauty.

It is along these lines—taking health and joy in life as a basis—that
