PROSPERITY NOT DESIRED

So Avers Writer Complaining Of Munitions Shipments To Europe.
La Grande, Oct. 16.—(To the Editor)—In a recent issue of the Observer two views are expressed wherein Mr. Creel says our President has given us peace with honor. But he did not say that the peace he had given us with so much honor has cost our nation an enormous war tax, through which he has been permitted to appoint several thousand Democratic revenue collectors, paying them big salaries and transportation expenses to go around to collect the revenue from the little war tax stamps. Our President said that the Democratic platform was not made of molasses to catch flies on and now, after four years of his administration what he said has proven true for he said that he will know molasses would be too expensive in the construction of the Democratic platform and would require a cheaper product and they have substituted the product they use to adulterate molasses with—a musilage they use to put on war tax stamps to catch pennies with so as to paste a badge. "He has kept us out of war" around every voter. Mr. Creel also says he has given us preparedness without militarism. Webster's dictionary says militarism pertains to warfare and if he has given us preparedness without militarism why is there a flag hanging front of every government building today asking for more soldiers to enlist to protect us on the Mexican border, and he has signed a bill investing himself with the power to conscript men into military service and if he has given us a peace preparedness with honor why are we in need of an army. The expense attending the border patrol is enormous and if this keeps up four years more his slogan will be "He has kept us out of the poor house." He is using all the money we have obtaining the costs of preparedness without militarism. He won't have enough left to even build a poor house.

Mr. Creel again says he has given us prosperity with justice. Has he stamped justice in very dollar's worth of the $300,000,000 worth of war supplies which left our shore every month to blot out lives in the land of our forefathers when the lifeblood of our human brothers flows like a river. Mothers, wives and sisters, think of like conditions at this moment prevailing in this land of ours! Would you think justice imbedded in the bullets that are piercing the bodies of your loved ones, bullets furnished by a foreign nation, and that foreign nation reaping the harvest of prosperity that our nation has, and is, reaping today? Think of that nation causing the misery that fills the mothers' breasts with pain almost unbearable. Then think of the bullets made by our nation and imbedded in the bodies of the boys and men who have fallen on battlefields and are in the hospitals—in every one of them a bullet endowed with prosperity but causing so much misery. I believe that if it was within the power of the framers and signers of the Declaration of Independence to rise from their graves they would thrust every bullet back at us and say such prosperity had no justice in it. Unparalleled prosperity has come "with justice," but it has caused and unknown amount of misery.
Mrs. Hattie Chandler Stillwell.

SHERRY'S

Myrtle Gonzales, Val Paul and Fred Church, who will be well remembered for their delightful work in "The Secret of the Swamp," a recent Bluebird Photoplay, will appear at the Sherry theatre last time today in "The Girl of Lost Lake," another production by the same author, Lynn F. Reynolds, in the Bluebird series. The play is founded upon a legend of Lost Lake, high up in the Sierras, and the Bluebird people kept their company for several weeks among the mountains to correctly picture the rugged "atmosphere" of the play. Despite the fact that there is no crime committed, no moral code violated or no "problem" involved, "The Girl of Lost Lake" provides intensely interesting entertainment because of the beauty of its story, plus the sumptuous and authentic manner in which the photoplay has been produced.

ARCADE

"NOT MY SISTER"
Bessie Barriscale in Triangle-Ince Drama. Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy in Motography.

Unusually attractive as to the grouping of the characters in scenes which have settings of singular tastefulness and beauty, "Not My Sister" has received treatment of a character that brings out the full dramatic power of the play at the hands of the cast and the director.
The play is by James Montgomery and C. Gardner Sullivan. "Not My Sister" is well constructed, however, and it is not commonplace picture drama. It will be at the Arcade today and tomorrow.

Telling of a girl who poses for an artist when her family faces poverty and who becomes the victim of his brutal cunning, "Not My Sister" is a picture containing no few strong dramatic moments. While her marriage and the return of the artist after a few years of absolute happiness with the husband who lives in blissful ignorance of the outrage his wife has suffered, were things to be expected and came as no surprise, the play sustains the interest throughout. The story shows thoughtful planning and it convinces.
Heading a well chosen and capable cast, Bessie Barriscale gives a powerful and finished portrayal of Grace Tyler. Miss Barriscale does full justice to the part and the opportunities furnished by it. It is a performance of consistency and artistic strength.

Undoubtedly the appeal of this picture is in a large way due to Miss Barriscale as Grace Tyler who, when the sculptor induced her younger sister to pose for him, determines to protect the young girl at whatever cost. The play reaches its climax in the court room where her husband is being tried for the murder of Arnold on the evidence of the butler who heard his master swear he would kill the artist after hearing his wife's confession.

The veil of doubt covering the identity of the person who killed Arnold is cleared when Grace's sister takes the stand and explains that she stabbed him when he attempted a repetition of his treatment of Grace. As played by Alice Taaffe Ruth, the younger sister, is a true-to-life character and a vastly appealing one.

William Desmond is quite satisfying as Michael Arnold and Franklin Richie and Louise Brownell complete the cast. Charles Giblyn is the director who has done so much to make "Not My Sister" a picture that will be found very interesting by the majority of adult picturegoers. A number of novel camera effects contribute to the finished balance of the picture.
