A Poster Flirtation.

The city authorities ought to get busy and stop that desperate flirtation that took place a short time ago between Mary Pickford and Charlie Chaplin. True it was only a poster affair but none the less serious and mushy.

"I say Mary," said Charlie, "they tell me that you are getting as much money for making people cry as I do for making them laugh."

"Oh you hush," gurgled Mary, "why I get infinitely more. When I heard that you were getting $640,000 per I had Adolph Zukor arrested for paying me so little (only $5,000 per.)"

"That ain't nothing," spoke up Charlie, "I get one million for myself next year and 92 per cent of the gross receipts but it's terrible to earn so little. A fellow don't know where his next meal is coming from."

"Yes, poor me," said Mary, "I positively tremble for the future. I needed a pair of new gloves last week and believe me I thought twice before I let go of the 48 cents asked."

"Oh I don't know," chirped Charlie, "I bought me a new $200,000 limousine yesterday and if you can get out of the mean old poster frame I'd like to take you for a spin."

"Shucks," laughed Mary as she showed a pretty dimple, "I don't ride in automobiles any more. I bought a new airship yesterday and if you want to have some fun come around to the hangar and I'll let you run a race with your limousine!"

At this Charlie very neatly fainted and there would have been much trouble but at this juncture Manager Trull saw what was going on and moved Charlie out of reach of Mary's smiling eyes and Mrs. Leiter of the Arcade rebuked Mary very curtly for having anything to do with a mere slap stick comedian so far beneath her in social and dramatic station.
