(Enterprise Chieftain.) A three-deck wagon load of turkeys was brought to town Tuesday afternoon, the fowls having been raised by George Greenwood on Snake river. There were 212 turkeys in the lot. They were driven up from the river and for quite a distance in the higher country, and then were gathered up and put in the wagon. When being driven they were handled like livestock of the four footed variety, forming an unusual herd. D. A. Roeth and family of Linton county, Arkansas, came in last Friday and will likely settle in or near Enterprise. Mr. Roeth stated that he had a car load of house hold goods on the way, they having left Arkansas at the same time he did. He has a large family of boys and girls and knows several people here so that they will be among friends. They left Arkansas with the intention of settling in the west and as this was the most desirable place they had heard of, they came here first.

A carload of heating equipment was unloaded the first of the week, including the boiler, radiators and pipes for the Wallowa National bank building, an outfit for S. L. Burnaugh's business block and for his house. Steam or hot water heat has been put in most of the new houses of the better class built this year, including the residences of A. M. Pace, Dr. J. H. Thompson, and J. L. Browning. Steam heat has been put in the Record Chieftain building, the steam being

French Girl Plays French Role

Owen Moore and Marguerite Courtot, Famous Players Stars in Paramount Pictures.

By the merest prank of Chance Marguerite Courtot was chosen by the Famous Players to play the role of Luise in "The Kiss," a Paramount Picture in which she is co-starring with Owen Moore. The script described Luise as a young girl of French descent living in America. Marguerite Gabrielle Courtot—for that is the star's complete name—though a native of Summit, N. J., is of French descent. She was educated abroad, and, as part of her educational process, the little star's mother has decreed that nothing but French shall be spoken in their home. By this means Miss Courtot is never permitted to forget her French, which she would have little opportunity of using outside of her household, except when she appears in such roles as that of "The Kiss," when she can talk her native tongue as part of the real atmosphere.

J. J. Weaver was called to La Grande last Friday by the last illness of his mother, Mrs. Mary L. Weaver, who died that same day. The funeral was held Saturday at Cove. Mrs. Weaver was 77 years old, and was born in Illinois. She came with her husband, who died some years ago, to the Grande Ronde valley in 1864, being among the first permanent settlers there. Mr. Weaver was accompanied back by Mrs. Melvina Ward, mother of his wife, and by Thomas Harmon and family and J. A. Ward, relatives of his wife. They will reside here.

While out hunting week before last, beyond the elk pasture, G. H. Beem, accidentally discharged his rifle while wiping the water from it, and the bullet went thru one hand which was over the muzzle. It inflicted a fearful wound. The wounded man was brought by his father, Joseph Beem, and his brother, Warren, part way to town, an automobile bringing him the remainder of the distance. Mr. Beem is still a patient at the hospital, and his wound is healing very well. His mother and sister Lucy were up from Wallowa last Thursday to see him.

Valuations of school districts and incorporated towns of the country have been segregated by F. F. McCully in the assessor's office, as a basis for the special tax levy which will be made shortly in each. Changes from last year are found in every district and town, some showing a gain for 1916 and others showing a loss. The total valuations in the county have not been completed, but the work will be finished in a few days.

Dr. C. A. Ault and J. W. Rodgers returned Saturday night from their automobile trip in the former's car, having been through much of eastern Washington and northern Idaho. They had two punctures in the trip and a piece of one spring broke, but these minor difficulties in no way were permitted to mar the pleasure of the jaunt.

Mrs. James Stanley and granddaughter, who have been visiting at the home of Jay H. Dobbin, returned on Friday to La Grande. It was the first trip into Wallowa county in 20 years for Mrs. Stanley, and she missed a few pioneer landmarks by which she knew this section in early days. She failed to find the alkali flat covered with range cattle, where Enterprise now stands, and also the swamp and jungle, just south of the town site.

Control of child labor which had appeared before June 30, 1916, are listed in two sections of the bibliography on child labor just issued by the Federal Children's bureau.

Material on practical experiments in training children for industry and in guiding a child to the trade where his opportunities are best and material on the effect of premature labor on the child's health form special sections. Previous bibliographies on vocational training and vocational guidance, and other subjects related to child labor such as mothers' pensions, minimum wage, and compulsory education, are noted in the bulletin.

Other sections contain references on child labor laws and their enforcement in various States, and the problem of uniform legislation. Of the 1828 references in the bulletin 445 are on individual industries, and 314 on child labor in foreign countries. The bulletin includes an author and subject index.

A first edition of this list was published by the Library of Congress ten years ago, and the present revised and greatly enlarged list has been compiled by the chief bibliographer of the Library of Congress with the assistance of the librarian of the Children's Bureau. The List of References on Child Labor may be obtained free upon application to the Chief of the Children's bureau, Washington, D. C.
