

SPONGES

SPONGE fishing is a precarious business and the product limited, therefore during the past few years the supply has been falling off and prices increasing.

The inexperienced sponge buyer may be "tricked" very easily on quality.

We know sponge quality and know how to grade them.

We carry sponges of every kind, grade and size and every one bears a price in keeping with its quality. When a sponge is wanted see us.

STYLE TIPS.

What to Wear Tucked into a Nutshell.

Empire styles are here. A popular design is in three pieces. The skirt extends three inches above the waist line. There is a wide front breadth, cut circular, with a side plait on each side. The back is plain, cut circular, and has a seam down the center.

Plaited skirts are in style. They are introduced to give a straighter figure line without cutting out any of the fullness at the skirt edge. There are loose plaits, pressed plaits, side plaits and inside and narrow box plaits. Some skirts are made with yokes, or the plaited effect is sometimes broken by a panel. Plaited plaid skirts are worn with tailored jackets of plain cloth, and velvet jackets are worn with plaited skirts of satin or broadcloth.

The fashionable princess dress is sometimes plaited from neck to hem with a loose belt at the sides. Other princess dresses are made with organ plaits at the sides, the plaits arranged at a point just halfway between the waist line and the knees. They are buttoned in front.

A novel blouse is the choirboy chemise made of bay patterned Chinese silk. It has long sleeves of soft silk and is worn with separate skirts. Other new blouses are of transparent material, such as silk voile, chiffon and tulle, made over another transparent material in a different color.

This is a season of combinations in fabrics and colors. Navy blue and gray are smart, also electric blue and black. Fawn, beige and butter color are used with chestnut brown or Balkan green. Browns are fashionable. There are cinnamon, tabac, beaver, chestnut and a warm golden brown. Burgundy, grape, prune, maroon, rubber gray, mist, taupe, navy blue, Dutch blue, electric, horizon, Japan and old China blue are among other colors.

Knife plaited colored tulle tunics, loosely belted, are worn over white satin skirts.

Many imitations of fur are to be used in trimming dresses and coats. Colored silk voiles are seen striped with imitation fur in a contrasting color.

Metal embroideries on gold, silver and copper, singly or in combination, are smart. Novelty laces are embroidered in shining arabesque or delicate grounds. A fascinating fancy is to have a gown trimmed with bead embroidery and to match it for the wrist bag.

Some of the new coats are modeled after the coats worn by men, such as long directoire coats and short coats worn by valets.

Fascinating collars in white or gaudy, crepe or silk are worn with blue, rose and cerise costumes.

Many gowns are made with elbow sleeves, with full tulle undersleeves banded into dainty wrist frills.

A new sash is made of three colors twisted together to form a belt, terminating in long knotted ends. Cream, pale blue and pale green, also rose, mauve and cream color, are combined. Black, red and orange look well with a white dress.

Velvets and smooth cloths trimmed with fur are the smartest tailor suits.

THIS BOLERO.

fullness. Over this is worn a tiny bolero of scalloped edges and hand embroidered front picked out with dainty white pearl buttons.

Styles In Suits.

The suits that are now being put up for winter are made with coats reaching to the knees and sometimes below that point. A few shorter lengths are also included in the models. Many of the coats are in fitted effect above the waist, with a considerable flare below that point. Others, however, are made on straight lines. A few of the more extreme suits are in moynay age effect, with the fullness set on at a very low waist line. On account of the length of the jacket the skirts of the suits are made on straight, simple lines. Many show plaited effects. Novel pockets and belts appear on some of the skirts.

Grape Ketchup.

For grape ketchup weigh the grapes and allow two pounds of sugar to ten of grapes, a pint of cider vinegar and an ounce each of mace, cloves and cinnamon. Boil the sugar and vinegar for fifteen minutes and add to the pulp and skins, which have been heated, rubbed through a colander to remove skins and seeds and cooled; then boil all together twenty minutes and bottle. Boil slowly, and if too thick add a little more vinegar.

War Oddities

London, Nov. 14—"How did you start life?" demanded an officer of the East Hempstead military tribunal of an applicant. "As a baby, I suppose," answered the applicant. "If you get too flippant you'll end it as a soldier," the officer retorted. "Yes, or a corpse," the applicant parried when the appeal was refused.
