North Produces Another Dream

New York, Nov. 25.—(Special.)—Out of the North has come another golden dream that may affect the economy of the world in years to come. Many of us remember the excitement that came with the finding of the Klondyke gold fields, and the effects that the discovery had was a very real and important one. Now we hear from a traveller who has come from a region near the north of Hudson Bay that there is a golden land there, which is almost staggering to contemplate. This traveller, who has returned to New York, is a man of science, and is by no means interested in mining operation. He tells his marvelous tale merely as an incident of his wanderings. He shows spear heads made of gold because the natives found this metal more easily than any other, and he even tells of hunters, who, when their leaden bullets gave out, used the yellow metal for the missile to bring down their prey. That there is such a country is not at all at variance with theories that mining experts have put out. The informer states, however, that the dangers and privations necessary to reach this land of wealth are far greater than those that were experienced by the seekers of the wealth of the Klondyke. One thing, however, has been proven in the history of the human race, and that is that wealth has never escaped mankind, simply because it is difficult to procure. If there is confirmation of the existence of this golden harvest, there is no but that seekers for it will be in abundance.

The City's Night for Prayer
When is prayer meeting night? At present various Protestant churches in the greater city of New York observe Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings, with an occasional meeting on Monday night. It is felt by many leaders in the church that if all the churches could agree upon one evening and set apart this night for public prayer, promoters of outside meetings, which church people are expected to attend, would spare
