Tips For The Farmer

This Auto Paid For Itself.

A writer in the November Farm and Fireside tells how an automobile earned its own way. He says:

"Many useful things can be done with an automobile, especially during the harvest season when men and teams are scarce.

"During the haying season when we use the stacker, we run out our car and attach the ropes to the rear axle of the car and proceed to lift up the loads of hay upon the stack using the low gear for forward and the reverse for backing up. This method gives much more pull even than when horses are used, and we don't have to bother with the worry of backing up the team of horses, which now by the use of the car can be at use in some other part of the field or at the sweep rakes. The car works equally well for pulling up the hayfork when we are unloading in the barn.

"We, like others, have found the car to be very profitable in marketing. In a seven-passenger car one may carry six coops of chickens at a time—two in the rear seat, two on a board frame extending out backward over the rear axle and one on each fender—and be at market, 11 miles away, in about thirty minutes."

Here Are Some Good Tips About Eggs In the November Farm and Fireside, a writer says:

"Beginners in poultry-keeping often wonder why some hens will lay steadily when eggs are worth but 10 cents a dozen and lay only an occasional egg or loaf continually when eggs are 35 cents a dozen. I used to blame the hen, but now I know that it isn't her fault.

"I have found that the time of year that the hens lay best is in the spring when there is plenty of green feed and an abundance of exercise. By feeding green products in the winter and compelling them to keep in action I can best imitate nature and bring spring conditions to my hens. The question is, Does it pay? It pays me.

"Cabbage and any of the beet family are green feeds which I used profitably to feed my chickens in the winter. Green cured alfalfa and clover, which has been steamed or boiled, sprouted oats, or pumpkins have also been profitable green feeds for my chickens."

FULL LINES OF GOODS ON HAND

Grocers Have Fine Lines and Plenty of it—Buying Brisk and Supply Will Go Around for All.

Seldom have grocers and meat purveyors have the fine, nice, full lines to offer their customers that they have this year. On the eve of Thanksgiving shopping—which is today and tomorrow morning—there was a splendid line in every grocery store. All the little delicacies that are needed, all the garnish required—in fact everything that goes to make a well-proportioned and nicely-embellished dinner was carried in such quantities and under such conditions that there is enough for all and all of it good. Wholesalers and retailers alike are to be complimented on the way they have laid in their supplies for the special demands of Thanksgiving week.

Prices hold even, little changing being noticed anywhere.

SURVIVAL OF THE PUREST

Sweet Caporal is the only cigarette to survive the test of forty years on the market and remain a national favorite, steadily gaining in popularity. Because in four decades the cigarette industry has been unable to produce a better cigarette. Sweet Caporal is the purest cigarette that can be made—with a pure tobacco flavor that has never been duplicated in any other cigarette at any price.
