There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Thanksgiving In "Ye Olde Colonial Dayes"

HISTORY tells us that in the early days in some of the colonies there was a puritanical hatred of Christmas, and when a day of thanks was set apart such "superstitious meats" as beef, pork, head, plum pudding and mince pie, all redolent of memories of the ancient feast, were eschewed in favor of turkey and pumpkin pie. The colonists were so pleased to celebrate Thanksgiving in this fashion of feasting, especially after they were compelled to listen to a long sermon, that they began to appoint frequent Thanksgiving days—sometimes for reason of victory over the Indians, then for the arrival of a supply ship or a bountiful harvest, says the Washington Star.

Usually the day set occurred in August, especially if it was in thanks for the harvest. Finally, in 1684, Massachusetts declared it to be an annual and legal holiday, and all the New England colonies followed her example. In those days Thanksgiving in its religious character was rather curious. On one side was the minister whose duty seemed to be to predict the most direful things, and his sermons consisted of warning to the people of the awful things to come, while, on the other hand, the people were told to rejoice and give thanks on that day, even though the pit yawned on the day before and the day to come. The whole thing was a paradox, for the wives were compelled to stay home and prepare the dinner, yet they were soundly berated by the ministers for being absent.

Many of the sermons aimed at the preference for the flesh pots over spiritual things, but after the discourse the preacher frequently went to dine with one of his parishioners and enjoyed the dinner prepared by the mistress of the house, whose absence he had commented on in the pulpit an hour before. The sermons seldom touched on fasting, but they included the political topics of the day, whether local, state or national. On one occasion at a Thanksgiving service a Federalist pastor in Connecticut prayed, "And, O Lord, endow President Jefferson with a goodly portion of thy grace, for thou, O Lord, knowest that he needs it!"

The festive trait of the day at that time seems to have been entirely in the hands of the women of the family, who for days before worked quietly to prepare a feast, and the deep religious gloom which pervaded the household during those years was in a measure lightened by the sunlight of the well cooked Thanksgiving dinner. A well fattened turkey at one end of the table and chicken pie at the other were the principal articles on the menu of the well to do man's Thanksgiving feast. The middle class had the chicken pie and a small turkey, while the poor feasted on the pie alone. But every table, rich or poor, had a fowl of some kind and usually a pitcher of cider to wash it down. A pie made of pigeons, too, was a favorite Thanksgiving dish. Strangers were made welcome, and not even a tramp was turned away. Unfortunately, this hospitality seems to have been based on a superstitious fear of bad luck rather than a genuine case of charity.

Woman Who "Made" Thanksgiving.
It was a woman, Mrs. Sarah J. Hale, editress of Godey's Lady's Book and well known as a writer, who championed the cause of a national Thanksgiving. Year after year she patiently fought for a national observance of Thanksgiving day, publishing endless articles on the subject. In various ways she caused an agitation of the subject that finally resulted in 1839 in the governors of most of the states of the Union annually issuing proclamations for Thanksgiving. At her suggestion President Abraham Lincoln issued a proclamation for a national Thanksgiving for Aug. 6, 1863, about a month after the battle of Gettysburg.

FALL CARE OF FLOWERS

Winter Protection for Perennial Plants—How to Prepare and Store Roots and Bulbs.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 24.—(By Mail)—Steps to be taken at this season for placing the flower garden in shape for winter will vary with the kinds of plants grown and the latitude, say specialists of the department. In the case of perennials, which die down to the ground but which should live through the winter and send up shoots again on the advent of warm weather, the roots should be well mulched with manure three or four inches deep as soon as the ground freezes. In this group are included such plants as peonies, larkspur, hollyhock, columbines, iris, platy-codones, and perennial poppies.

Cannas and Kindred Plants.

Plants such as cannas, dahlias, gladiolas, and Caladiums should have their roots dug up and stored in a cellar where the temperature will not rise above 60 degrees nor fall below 50 degrees F. The root clumps of cannas and dahlias should not be shaken free of soil. These plants with the soil naturally adhering to them should be placed on racks or in slat boxes so that air may circulate among them. It is important that the roots do not become too warm or dry and that no frost shall reach them. The bulbs of gladiolas, Caladiums, and tuberose, on the other hand, should be carefully cleaned of soil and dried in the open air for a day or two. They may then be stored in the cellar.

Geraniums.

In all but semitropical portions of the United States geraniums must be taken indoors for winter. Florists usually make cuttings in the fall to grow new plants in greenhouses for spring use. This practice is, of course, impracticable for the average householder. The latter may take up growing plants and hold them in a dormant condition by storing upright in boxes of dry soil in a cellar having a temperature of from 40 degrees to 50 degrees F. The plants may be placed close together with only a little dry soil among the roots.

Panicles.

While taking many plants indoors for the winter, the home gardener in a large section of the country should set out in the fall the pansy plants which are to make up the spring beds of these flowers. This procedure should be followed in the country south of a line from New York City to Springfield, Ill. The young plants should be covered by coarse manure at the first freezing of the ground before it has an opportunity to thaw.

Preparing Shrubs for Winter.

While a number of the shrubs commonly grown in the garden will go through the winter without injury if let alone, others must be given varying degrees of special attention. Among the shrubs which need no unusual fall and winter care are snowball, spirea, mock orange, and lilacs. Hydrangeas, even in the south, must have special winter protection and in the north must be lifted, set in tubs, and kept in a frost-proof cellar. An east and west line through Philadelphia is generally accepted as marking the boundary north of which it is necessary to take hydrangeas indoors. South of this line it is usually sufficient to protect the tops of the plants with straw or brush while they are in their outdoor locations. A little manure or straw may be placed on this covering to hold it in place. The bugmansia, or thorn apple, should be treated like the hydrangea.
