SHERRY'S

Viola Dana Lends Strength to a Powerful Screen Story.

Viola Dana, in "The Gates of Eden," a five-reel Metro-Columbia production which will be the feature attraction at the Sherry theatre on Sunday, lends strength to a powerful screen story.

Miss Dana is seen in two roles, first as Evelyn, a scorned mother in a Shaker community, and next as Eve, her daughter. The play is peculiarly fitted to the talents of this young star, who is called upon in one part to depict the emotions of a heart-broken mother and in another the tender feelings of a pure girl whose great love defies religious fanaticism and the rage of a revenge-crazed father.

"The Gates of Eden," which is a story of life in a Shaker community whose members have taken vows of celibacy, was written by the Rev. William E. Danforth. The seven production was directed by John H. Collins.

It was because of her distinct talents as an emotional actress that Miss Dana was chosen as the star for this great drama. She has been on the stage practically all her life and much of her early dramatic training was under Joseph Jefferson.

Sherry's Today Only.

One of the best stories that the English novelist, E. Phillips Oppenheim, ever wrote, is dramatized for the screen in the Red Feather production, which appears under the title, "Under Suspicion." When the original was published in the Saturday Evening Post, it was called "The Amiable Charlatan," and this title just describes the chief character, Joseph H. Parker, which is played in masterly fashion by Douglas Munstill more devious paths, and the interest of the audience in his wriggings and avoidance of consequences never flags.

The picture version of the story was produced by George Loane Tucker, whose great success, "Traffic in Souls," has not yet been forgotten. The company has been excellently chosen, and the complicated story so clearly presented that the director's intention is never for an instant obscured.

Miss Happiness

Marguerite Courtot, Famous Players Star in Paramount Pictures.

Because she is always smiling and always happy, Marguerite Courtot has come to be known around the studio as "Miss Happiness." It matters not what happens she always sees the bright side of things and is continually making others happy by the manner in which she does things.

"FLIRTING WITH FATE."

Douglas Fairbanks Stars Again in Triangle-Fine Arts Comedy. Reviewed By Thomas C. Kennedy in Motography

Put to the extremity of wearing false beards and dodging practically every other person he meets on the streets because of a change for the better in his once distressful affairs of the heart and bank account, Douglas Fairbanks as Augie, the love-struck artist, puts a quantity of vim and zest into a picture telling a story similar to many screen stories told before. But the main situation of the play, that of the man who hires an assassin to put him out of the way only to change his mind and to live in horror until the danger passes, is the only thing which resembles in any way previous screen comedies.

Robert M. Baker, who wrote the scenario, did a good thing when he used the idea if for no other reason than that Fairbanks was so well able to make it funny. "Flirting with Fate" is a thoroughly enjoyable picture. It is nearly all Douglas Fairbanks but when one considers that he is all actor possessing so much color and dash it is readily understood that this is nothing against "Flirting with Fate" far from that; it is something in its favor. The hired assassin is one of the most deftly handled characters in the picture. He appears at just the right moment to make things interesting and amusing. It is doubtful if any other photoplay ever got so much real good effect out of a straight comedy character. Augie first meets the terrible man when he goes into a saloon to get a quarter so he can turn on the gas and end all his trouble. He only meets Automati: Joe once again and that is the end of the picture. But in the meantime Augie's imagination leads him a merry dance.

to yield sixty-one seconds but every moment was enjoyed tranquilly. Those "befo' the Wah" days are remarkably portrayed in the Morocco-Paramount photoplay, "Her Father's Son," coming to the Arcade, Monday only.

A young girl in a Southern mansion is successfully masquerading as a boy when the war brings the great upheaval. Utilizing this double personality beautiful Vivian Martin alternates between the roles of a handsome boy and a Southern belle in a highly delightful and amusing manner.

"Her Father's Son" is one of the films endorsed in the Woman's Home Companion and classed as belonging to the Family Group.
