far from him, supported at large expense, which not only contains standard books on the subject he wants to know about, but makes a special business of supplying him with those books promptly and without expense.

"From its card index he can learn in five minutes what books there are on the subject, and attendants will fetch them to him on request."

"The library habit is one of the best that any person can form. There should be a more strenuous effort to inculcate it. Meantime take the initiative yourself. Get acquainted with your public library."

Among the various publications in the local public library which give information of this sort are the following:

"The United States Catalog," a work of the size of the unabridged dictionary, contains a list of all books in print in the United States, with the names of publishers, and prices. This is supplemented monthly and annually. It contains subject entries also. Thus, it is possible to find in a few minutes a list of recent books on a given subject; for example, for the past year, eight works are listed on "Agricultural credit."

Another index which keeps up to date, with a complete annual edition, is the "Book Review Digest." This gives the names of the most important new books, with a brief summary of the contents, and extracts, favorable or unfavorable, from book reviews published in the leading papers and magazines. Thus "When a Man's a Man," by Harold Bell Wright, is given half a column, in which the "Boston Transcript" is quoted as saying that "He knows as little about human nature as a caterpillar knows about the Halley comet, etc." On the other hand, the Springfield Republican tells us that "Mr. Wright's psychology may not be always convincing, but the book's wholesomeness and manly strength are probably more characteristic of American life than some of this author's sophisticated detractors pretend."

Less inclusive, but very reliable, is the A. L. A., i. e. (American Library Association) Booklist. This contains a selection of the best new books, with descriptive and critical notes. It is an excellent guide for the selection of books for children, and lists the most interesting of the recent government documents.

It is possible to find any given article in the best-known magazines, by reference to the "Readers' Guide to Periodical Literature," which also lists all articles on the subjects currently written about.

These indexes are all accessible to the public on request. If you want information, and have not time to come to the library, telephone Main 760, any time between 1 and 6, or 7 and 9 p. m. If it is not at hand, the librarian may be able to find it elsewhere for you.

THE CHIMES

Lord, through this hour
Be Thou our guide,
So, by Thy power,
No foot shall slide.

Everyone who has lived within sound of the Bells of Westminster is familiar with the verse given above. The origin of the carillon has never been positively established. Some writers credit it to a Mr. Crouch, who was a pupil of Dr. Randall, Regius Professor of Music. This, however, is disputed by other writers who credit it to Dr. Randall's conception of the idea taken from a movement in the fifth bar of the opening of Haendel's Symphony. "I know that my Redeemer liveth." The Chimes were first fitted to the Clock of University church, St. Mary's the Great, in Cambridge, but were not copied until they were reproduced on a very large scale in the Victoria Clock Tower of the Houses of Parliament.

As a home institution serving the people of this locality—enjoying your good will and business favors, we have in the past endeavored to show our appreciation by presenting our patrons with calendars and novelties and otherwise recognizing your co-operation in making this a serviceable and successful banking house.

Years of prosperous banking have been made possible only by your support. We wanted to show our appreciation in a substantial way and have therefore purchased of the manufacturers, the McClintock-Loomis Company of Minneapolis, Minnesota, including the exclusive rights for this city, a large handsome clock combined with a set of soft and most beautiful chimes.

At the quarter, half and three-quarter hour, these Chimes will ring out in various musical combinations; at quarter past the hour, four strokes—Westminster, at half past the hour, eight strokes—Reveille; at three-quarters past the hour, twelve strokes—Cathedral peal; and on the hour, sixteen strokes—Westminster, followed by the striking of the full hour, in a clear vibrant tone.

May we hope that the Chimes will mean something to all of our people—that they will have a message for the youngster on his way to school; a thought for the business man who hustles through his day; a solace for the old.

Every day of the week the chimes will be sounding their message—the note of warning spoken in time; the chime of rejoicing; the lament in time of sorrow. This chime will be all things to all men for it is going to belong not to us alone, but to men and women and children of our community.

Library Habit Is Good One to Form

Saturday Evening Post Says It Is a Good Habit to Form—Many Works of Reference and Indexes to Books and Periodicals Available.

The following editorial is quoted in part from the current number of the Saturday Evening Post, the article being headed "The Library Habit":

"Our mail makes us a bit peevish about public libraries in general. Many times every year we are asked to recommend a book containing information on this or that subject of general interest. We are always glad to comply to the best of our limited ability; yet we never answer one of these letters without wondering why public libraries do not impress themselves more definitely and extensively upon the consciousness of those who support them or whose official duties they are supposed to be.

"The writer of the letter is obviously intelligent or he would not be seeking information. By the same token he is interested in subjects of general concern. Yet, as obviously, he does not know that about three times out of five there is a public institution not
