At Last Someone Comes To Defense of the Barber

So Many Unkind Things Have Been Said That New York Writer Rises to Their Defense and Shows Their Upward Trend.

New York, Jan. 6.—(Special)—From time to time unkind things have been said about barbers, that generally took the form of declaring them to be more interested in persecuting their customers by an over-amount of conversation than in looking after their comfort while they are being shaved. It is announced by the authorities at Sing Sing prison that the internal economic conditions of the place is being badly affected by the absence of a sufficient number of the members of the tonorial profession. Such has never been the case before. Usually the famous prison harbored enough men of each trade to make it a all-sustaining community. But barbers have recently fallen off so in attendance that there are not enough to do all the shaving and hair cutting that is needed to be done. This is likely to cause considerable surprise. It is generally supposed that the advent of the safety razor was such a cause of irritation, both financially and mentally, to the barber, that crime amongst them was likely to increase. Then too they have been the victims of a certain class of supposed humor that would make crime at times seem most justifiable by them, and the fact that they withstood temptation, and evidently attained a higher moral standard is, under the circumstances, greatly to be counted in their favor.

Prefers Chamberlain's.

"In the course of a conversation with Chamberlain Medicine Co.'s representative today, we had occasion to discuss in a general way the merits of their different preparations. At his suggestion I take pleasure in expressing my estimation of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I have a family of six children and have used this remedy in my home for years. I consider it the only cough remedy on the market, as I have tried nearly all kinds." —Earl C. Ross, Publisher Hamilton County Republican-News, Syracuse, Kan.

"SEVENTEEN"

Booth Tarkington's Delightful Boy Story in Pictures—Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy.

The popularity enjoyed by Booth Tarkington's novel should make this Famous Players' picturization of the delightfully humorous sketch of a boy who has reached the age most interesting to contemplate, seventeen years an attraction of no little notability. Louise Huff and Jack Pickford are the featured players and both realize the splendid opportunities offered by their parts. The production will be presented today and tomorrow at the Arcade together with two acts of vaudeville.

"Seventeen" is a very happy screen offering. Its appeal is broad, for its enjoyment is not restricted to either young or old. To the adult many pleasant memories will be recalled by suggestion and though those picture-goers whose seventeenth year is still before them will miss much through a failure to appreciate the faithfulness of the story to life, the occasions of pure good humor arising from the situation in the story of themselves make the picture entirely worth the while spent in viewing it.

It seems unnecessary to give here an outline of the story. The book has been so widely read for one thing and for the other the real delightful quality of this tale would be lost altogether in such an account. "Seventeen" is the story of a boy who thinks that he is now a man of affairs. He must shave and he above all must take things very seriously. To make the picture complete there is the little sister who has a terrible appetite for bread and jam; the pretty girl William loves her so deeply; the youth who can afford a sporty motor car; Genes's, the black who works about the place and tells William that the only way he knows of getting fifty dollars is to "sell your body to them doctors, but you gotta be dead." In fact, the group of young people around whom the story is woven is typical. We are sure that we saw in them perfect likenesses of the fellow beings who made up our world at the age of seventeen.

Walter Heirs, a comedian of quality and promise, Winifred Allen, Madge Evans, Dick Lee, Richard Ross, Julian Dillon, Helen Lindroth, and Anthony Merlo are members of the cast. "Seventeen" is abrim with brightness and good cheer. It is the sort of entertainment that sends one away from the theater with a more healthy and wholesome feeling toward the world generally than accompanied one into the playhouse.

Inactivity Causes Constipation.

Lack of exercise in the winter is a frequent cause of constipation. You feel heavy, dull and listless, your complexion is sallow and pimply, and energy at low ebb. Clean up this condition at once with Dr. King's New Life Pills, a mild laxative that relieves the congested intestines without griping. A dose before retiring will assure you a full and easy movement in the morning; 25c at your druggist.

Oregon University Has a New Poetess

Miss Grace Edgington Formerly of Salem Is Attracting Attention in the Literary World.

Salem, Jan. 8.—(Special)—More than a little attention in the ranks of alumni and the older students of the university in the honor recently bestowed on Miss Grace Edgington, who studied at old Willamette for two years in 1910-11 has been manifested since Saturday. Her poem entitled "Pictures" was selected for the Anthology of American College Verses, a volume published annually by college students during the preceding year. The poem was written in Eugene where Miss Edgington, now a graduate of the University of Oregon, is copyreader on the Eugene Morning Register. It was inspired by the beautiful millrace that passes the state university campus.

During the two years Miss Edgington studied in the local institution, her work as conductor of the famous "Columbia's Corner" in the Willamette Collegian was the delight of the student body and alumni. She was manager of the Ladies' Glee club as well as president of the Philodorian society, where she served with remarkable executive ability for a coed. Her success in the writer's field is being watched by her many friends in Salem.

English style rugby football, lawn tennis and rowing are favorite sports in Argentina but baseball is making great headway.
