GEORGE W. JETT DEAD

Past Grand Chancellor of Baker Pythians Succumbs At 62.

Baker, Ore., Jan. 8.—(Special)—George W. Jett, past grand chancellor of Baker Knight of Pythias, at one time representative to the supreme lodge at Washington, D. C., died Friday morning at his home in this city after a long illness, coupled with paralysis.

Mr. Jett was born in Trenton, Mo., 62 years ago and when 12 years old went to Chillicothe, Mo. He came with his brother to Oregon in 1871, walking most of the way here from Kelson, Utah, then the terminus of the railroad. He engaged in mining, grocery and other business until he was elected county assessor in 1900, serving two terms. He was last engaged in the real estate and insurance business.

He is survived by his wife, two sons George L. Jett and Harry C. Shepard; one daughter, Mrs. Fred W. Johnson; one brother, John H. Jett, and one sister, Mrs. B. F. Baird, all of Baker.

Imbler

Imlber, Jan. 8.—(Special)—E. E. Hurley, who was home from Seattle for the holidays, went to La Grande Tuesday evening en route for the Sound City, where he will resume his work in the University of Washington. Mr. Hurley will graduate from that institution at the end of the year.

Sunday evening members of the Methodist congregation held a watch party at the church following their usual services. The league service was combined with a literary program. A light lunch was served at a late hour, the New Year was ushered in with bell-ringing and the usual annual crop of resolutions.

A New Year dance billed for last Monday night was cancelled by the snow drifts.

George Marshall started east with two carloads of apples Wednesday, with the intention of disposing of the fruit in Idaho markets. The apples were of several varieties.

N. A. Cramer, principal of District No. 78, reported to the board that on assembling Tuesday morning, the entire school consisted of two teachers and one pupil. As a result the school was closed for the week. Sickness and the snowstorm were responsible for the slump in attendance.

Windstorms during the last few days have drifted the snow in lanes running east and west so deep that fields bordering these roads are being used as public highways. Unusable roads to the mountains become impassable within the next week, many people here are going to feel the effect of a fuel famine.

Only one game has been played during the week on the local basketball floor. The Mt. Glenn M. I. A. boys played here Wednesday, winning from the Imbler M. I. A.'s by a narrow margin. The high school team goes to Summerville for a game January 9th. Members of the Social Aid Society postponed their monthly meeting which was slated for January 4, at Mrs. Ed. Dennison's.

The Dr. Blackinton family will soon have their quarantine orders cancelled as most of the members have recovered from their recent attack of diphtheria.

BAKER NEEDS COAL

Supply Is Low and Storm Means Famine, Dealers Say.

Baker, Ore., Jan. 8.—(Special)—Milder weather, bordering on a chinook, helped relieve the coal shortage that is threatening the city, although dealers say that there is still real danger of the city having a famine unless conditions are bettered.

Only a few tons of the fuel were to be had today, and those because of a carload being received from Wyoming this morning. All the dealers have cars of coal on the road from Wyoming and Utah, but say they do not know when they will arrive, and that should a blizzard again tie up the roads Baker will suffer.

The city uses about 65 tons a day and there is not nearly a day's supply in the bins of all dealers here combined.

Special Train To Baker.

Ho ye, ho ye! All aboard the flying special for Baker, Jan. 9th! La Grande Odd Fellows have chartered a special train to go to Baker, Tuesday evening, January 9th. The train will leave La Grande at 6 o'clock sharp and return the same evening. One and a third round-trip fare will be charged. Passage on this train is not restricted to Odd Fellows alone. Any one who wants to go to Baker and back on this date, is welcome to the privilege of this special train. Odd Fellows and Rebekahs are especially invited to go.

La Grande lodge will put on the first degree for the Baker lodge, and the degree work will be followed with a banquet to visiting brethren. Elk Horn lodge at Baker is preparing to entertain their guests in the royal fashion for which Baker lodge is famous.

Any one desiring to go to Baker on this special train should see Mr. Ed. Coolidge, at the La Grande National Bank, or Mr. A. R. Marker, at the office of Ivanhoe & Marker, or Mr. M. Ellidge, at his grain and feed store. Or tickets may be secured at the depot on the evening of the 9th.

P. Hoff. This is exclusive of working capital and timber holdings and includes only the buildings, machinery and other equipment that is actually used in putting timber and articles manufactured therefrom on the market. Two years ago the total investment was $19,242,119.

HANDSOME OLIVER IN LIMELIGHT

Slade & Slade, who also are under indictment for perjury in connection with the case, still claim that it was James W. Osborne who smiled acquaintance with Rae and wooed her to wed him. The three promise "big surprises" at the trial.

The handsome "Oliver" however, remains the big attraction. His captivating story of how he has given Cupid cards and spades and beaten him time after time in the game of love, has amazed and disgusted those who heard it; while at the same time his personality, his "way," has left everyone liking him in spite of what he has done.

Even the women he duped while he blazed a trail of broken hearts and pocketbooks across the land have nearly always had a smile for the big fellow when they attended his private audiences to identify him. There wasn't even much ill feeling in the remark of Ethel Brooks, whom "Oliver" married under the name of Maise Mason Nye, when, in identifying him she said: "This is the specimen I married." She, by the way, was the only one of the many women in "Oliver's" career that he actually married.

"Oliver's" real name is Charles H. Wax. He has been positively identified as the man who duped them, by many women in and around New York. He seemed always to choose those who had several thousand dollars he could talk them out of.

Wax is a big man, about 5 feet 10 inches tall. He weighs about 200 pounds. He is jovial and very pleasant to meet. His eyes are blue and keen. His brown hair is thinned a little over his rather good forehead. His nose is straight and strong. His constantly laughing lips reveal two rows of dazzling white teeth. There's a dimple in his chin that all the young women who have testified for the government at previous trials of the Osborne case described as one of the charms of their "Oliver."

Wax's carriage is youthful and jaunty. He exudes a real physical magnetism and around the federal building and in the Tombs everyone admits they "just can't help" but like him, despite the things he admits having done.

"Of course Wax is not the Oliver Osborne I knew and who accompanied me to the Hotel Kensington in Plainfield," said Rae Tanzer today. "I have seen Wax' pictures. He is no more like Oliver than a lamp post. At my trial this will be shown without question."

"Wait until my lawyer gets this cheap imposter on the stand. Wait until he has to explain away a thousand and one things that support my assertion that James W. Osborne is Oliver." Still, the self-styled King of Hearts swears he is tiny Rae's Oliver, and thus matters stand until the trial.
