NEWSPAPER MEN FROM COUNTRY OFFICES HELP GOVERN NEW YORK CITY

Reporters Playing Important Part in Fusion Administration of New York—Blood Giving Developing into a Business—Sub-Treasury in New York Overflowing With Gold—Manhattan Gets a Taste of the Delights of Punishment in the Hereafter.

BY LONGARE.

New York, Feb. 6.—(Special)—The announcement by Fire Commissioner Bob Adamson, that fire prevention work is the chief factor in a remarkable reduction in tenement house fires, reminds me that newspaper men are playing a mighty important part in the success of the Mitchell administration. Lyman Gage, when he was secretary of the treasury, often said that if he had any job requiring unusual adaptability, diplomacy and political or business fitness, he would get a newspaper man to fill it. Mayor Mitchell's cabinet seems to have taken a leaf out of Gage's book of political wisdom. Some fifteen years ago, when Bob Adamson was political reporter on the World, his brother Tilden—both of them bright boys, from Macon, Ga.—was star man for the Brooklyn Eagle. George Terrell was co-star. Bill Bullock, the Irishman who made no little name for himself as "Pat" of "Pat's Impressions" was dramatic critic of the Press. Then there was Eddie Hungerford, also on the Eagle, who used to occupy his leisure hours in working out railroad schedules for single track roads. That boy could put enough trains over a single track to pay fabulous dividends on the stock of a four-track trunk line. Only Eddie did it on paper, while the railroad must do it on steel.

Longare was a cub who basked in the very occasional approval of these greater lights.

Occasionally this group would gather in Tilden Adamson's rooms in old Montague street, Brooklyn, and between deals would exchange views on matters of no importance whatsoever. If you wish to listen to absolutely useless and senseless conversation get behind a door while a bunch of newspapermen are enjoying the usual journalistic recreation. Right at this point it should be recorded—if I were to follow the usual custom of reminiscences—that even at this early stage of their development, I saw in these large municipal lights faint glimmers of their future brilliance. But, although I say it in sorrow, I didn't! It was just an ordinary base bunch of newspaper men whose blases—largely thin veneer—was terribly impressive to me, the inexperienced cub.

And now look at 'em! Bob Adamson, fire commissioner! Tilden Adamson, chief watch dog in the finance department! George Terrell chief of the bureau of standards in the finance department. Bill Bullock, Tammany hall's municipal critic who holds up to public scorn the foolish acts of his newspaper friends of those grave old days. Eddie Hungerford is writing pieces about railroads for the magazines. The cub of the party is still scribbling.

Newspaper men do make good in high places, and many of them achieve those places. The list is too long to give here. I must record, however, that the National City bank apparently finds the training of the newspaper office a pretty good basis for successful banking. Frank A. Vandervlip, its president, was a Wall street reporter before he began to make a living. And he it recorded here also that most of the reporters who have risen to high places got their start in country newspaper offices. Yes, it is also true that most of them who fail also got their start with country newspaper. I got my start in so small and insignificant a country newspaper office that I should be either a howling success or a most dismal failure. I am not enough of the latter to achieve a comfortable berth in a charitable organization's old men's home. No one can tell, however, what degree of comfort the next few years may bring forth.

It is difficult to say whether blood-giving is an art or an industry, but if the practice of transfusion increases long at the present rate there will be a Bloodgivers' Union. That name is not copyrighted, and it is not offered with any pride on Longare's part. Word comes from Baltimore that more than one hundred derelicts from the Friendly Inn have undergone blood tests at $1 apiece this winter at the Union Protestant Infirmary, a branch of John Hopkins, for transfusion cases. Of the one hundred, twenty-five have been accepted and have been paid $25 for submitting to transfusions. In addition to the twenty-five dollars, those who are accepted are being paid at the rate of one dollar a day to keep themselves in condition until they are needed. The blood of these men from the Friendly Inn, it is recorded, now courses through the veins of a number of prominent men and women of Baltimore.

Anybody who has use for a little extra gold may apply to the New York assay office and the sub-treasury. Both are crowded to overflow with the precious yellow stuff. So great is the pressure that the vaults of the mint at Philadelphia are being enlarged to hold the overflow from New York. When the improvements are made the Philadelphia vaults will hold $1,000,000,000.

The sub-treasury here has been compelled to pile bags of coin in the underground corridors between the rows of strong boxes. These corridors have been closed up and the interior of the huge vault, running the entire length and breadth of the building, is solidly packed with gold. The passages have been narrowed down until there is scarcely room for two persons abreast.

One of the most pleasant ideas of eternal torment for our enemies is to have inflicted upon them in the hereafter the torments which they have inflicted upon us in the here. Can any one picture without a glow of pleasure the delight he would have in forcing a subway guard into a handbox with a pitchfork? No less delightful would be the experience of walking over the bare feet of an end seat hog with hobnailed boots. Think of the joy in putting certain of our friends, both male and female, into a room with seven thousand talking machines going at the same time. How pleasant it would be to be at the other end of a wire that a telephone operator must continuously use and respond to her inquiries with that infernal "line's busy." What exquisite delight in pouring a plate of hot soup down a waiter's neck!

New Yorkers experienced some of this sort of pleasure when they learned that the extra waiters called into a New York hotel for a special occasion were forced to tip the hat boy.

Sell It By The Want-Ad Route

The Observer's little want ads do the work. It is surprising how many people turn to them every day and how quickly they meet the eye and bring buyer and seller together.

Look over your premises and see what you have to sell. A want ad describing it will hit the mark and turn something you do not need into cash.
