HERE'S BUSHEL AND HALF OF REDDEST HAIR ON EARTH; AND HER NAME IS KELLY!

MARGOT KELLY

The reddest hair on earth! There's a bushel and a half of it on the head of a New York woman. And her name is Kelly! Margot Kelly says that in these days of the high cost of everything there's a great advantage in having the carrot locks, which she tosses in "Pierrot, the Prodigal." They're so red they singe themselves, saving their owner 50 cents a week.

When You Have a Cold. It is when you have a severe cold that you appreciate the good qualities of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Mrs. Frank Crocker, Pana, Ill., writes: "Our five-year-old son Paul caught a severe cold last winter that settled on his lungs and he had terrible coughing spells. We were greatly worried about him as the medicine we gave him did not help him in the least. A neighbor spoke so highly of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy that I got a bottle of it. The first dose benefitted him so much that I continued giving it to him until he was cured."

OUR STATE SCHOOLS

Among other things, the 1915 legislative committee named to investigate the state university and agricultural college, submit the following findings to the present legislature.

The housing of students at both institutions should as far as possible be in dormitories extension of which is advocated.

Organization of new college fraternities should be prohibited and fraternities be discouraged.

Counsel limitation of duplication in courses.

Advise abolition of the school of commerce at the state university. Makes criticism that undue advantage is taken of students both at Corvallis and Eugene in the matter of house rents and general living expenses.

There is no doubt of the sincerity of the purpose of the legislative committee. It is correct in its recommendation relative to extension of dormitories for the students. The atmosphere of studentship about a well conducted dormitory is always recognizable and always reassuring.

The trouble at Corvallis and Eugene is lack of dormitory accommodations. This lack is one of the reasons why there has been so large a growth of college fraternities and sororities. The latter organizations are partly the outgrowth of failure of the state to provide dormitories. It is the process by which the students have supplied the housing the state fails to supply.

This is not, of course, the only reason for fraternities. For better or for worse, fraternities have worked themselves deeply into the college life of America. Their organization ramify the whole educational system and those who have gone out from college halls are becoming considerable factors in the social order. It is impossible to drive them out of existence, because there are many eminent and powerful men who are of them and who defend them. It is, however, not difficult to join with the committee in advising that the extension of fraternities and sororities in state educational institutions be not encouraged.

A way not to encourage it is to supply the institutions with adequate housing, especially since it is beyond the resources of the communities in which the institutions are located to provide the large bodies of students in attendance with suitable board and lodging.

As to duplication of courses, it is doubtful if further deletion of courses can be made without damage to both schools. The board of higher curricula has accomplished a great deal in that direction.

A scientific education without literary and historical culture is a defective thing. Pure culture without a goodly mingling of practical science is wan and withered.

The agricultural bulletins sent out from time to time by the university might perhaps more appropriately issue from the agricultural college. But this is a comparative trifle. It can be adjusted if it is worth while to make a fuss over it, without radical disturbance of the work at either place.

The Journal does not agree with the committee that the school of commerce at the university should be abolished. Its function is entirely above the commercial school at the agricultural college, or at least is so designed to be by the board of higher

FULTZ, HEAD OF PLAYERS FRATERNITY, MOST TALKED OF MAN IN BASEBALL TODAY!

Dave L. Fultz

Fultz organized the fraternity in August, 1912, as a direct result of the Detroit players' famous strike in May, which followed suspension of Ty Cobb after he attacked a spectator at New York. Fultz's career as an athlete has been long and brilliant. He was one of the greatest halfbacks ever developed at Brown. The next three years he managed the famous Homestead (Pa.) professional football team and in 1902 coached the Lafayette team. The following year he coached at Brown. In baseball he played in the outfield, starting his major league engagements with the Phillies.

CHALLENGES STARS TO EXCHANGE ROLES

LAURETTE TAYLOR.

Miss Taylor, playing in "The Harp of Life," has challenged other stars in New York to exchange roles at a benefit matinee. She claims she can play any part. The other stars are Maude Adams, Elsie Ferguson, Frances Starr, Emma Dunn and Ruth Chatterton. Emma Dunn has accepted the challenge.

NO REGRETS

The lawyers of New York the other night gave a banquet in welcome of Charles Evans Hughes back to the practice of the law. It was distinguished occasion, and the tribute to the ex-Governor, ex-justice and ex-candidate was obviously sincere and unqualified.

It may have been expected that there would be repinings and recriminations or complaints. But listen to Mr. Hughes on his adventure into Presidential politics:

I come back to the bar without complaints and without regrets. I return to practice proud of the work of the lawyer, and grateful for the opportunity that that work offers. I have no wounds to exhibit. I shall say nothing of either battle or murder or sudden death. I have no desire to evoke sympathy or any suggestion of misfortune. I did not wish to resign from the Supreme Court, but I did resign because I thought it was my duty to resign and I do not regret that which I did with that purpose.

A good loser, a good loser, indeed, precisely what Mr. Hughes' friends and admirers would have wanted him to say. But he said other things about the duties of public men and the rewards of public service:

What I took away from Albany and cherish as a memory is this, that if a man will do what he thinks he ought to do, whether he makes a mistake or hits it right, he will have the generous support of the people and a strong backing from all thoughtful citizens, and he does not need to manipulate politics in order to succeed.

The which may be unreservedly commended to various aspiring gentlemen at Salem who fancy that the way to fool all the people all the time is to ascertain what is popular, and not what is true, or sound, or right, and get on the band wagon.
