WATTS WATT TALK NO. 3

The other day we told you about watts and their relation to your light, power and heat bills. We told you how you could estimate how many watt-hours a lamp or other device would use in any given period. The next step is to figure how much it would cost you to use that device.

If you buy a dozen or a hundred of an article you can usually get a better price than by buying one. Our rates are based on the same principle. We give below our rates for light, heat and power in Baker and La Grande and suggest you cut them out for future reference.

In later Talks we will tell you, why we are able to give cheaper rates for heat and power than for lighting.
