Concerning the Price of Paper
The following is from an editorial in the Living Church, of Feb. 3, a paper published in Milwaukee in the interest of the Episcopal Church.

"It may be that there will be no available printing paper in this country next fall at any price; for—shall we tell a secret that has come to us on what seems to be good authority?—the real trouble about paper seems to be that the sulphite pulp is being shipped abroad to the belligerent nations on a huge scale for use as a substitute for gun cotton.

The firm which publishes this paper publishes also other periodicals and books. It has recently announced that its bill for print paper for the ensuing year, will be $20,000 more than that of last, owing to the increase in price."

SHERRY'S
Charles Dickens has made an imperishable gift to literature in "A Christmas Carol," and, under the title of "The Right to Be Happy," Bluebird Photoplays, Inc., has translated this great lesson of benevolence and charity to the screen—visualized it for the masses who have not or, mayhap, will not read the classic story in its original form. Rupert Julian will head the Bluebird company in presenting "The Right to Be Happy" at the Sherry theater tonight last time with Francelia Billington, Roberta Wilson, Emory Johnson, Claire McDowell, John Cook and other clever screen artists, in his support. It may be well to suggest to those who have not read "A Christmas Carol" that old Scrooge (the role played by Mr. Julian) was the world's champion grouch—the meanest man in literature. Bob Cratchit, on the contrary, was the world's greatest optimist. Cratchit worked for Scrooge and when Christmas eve arrived was sent home with a snarl instead of a word of cheer—for Scrooge did not believe in the "Christmas Spirit" and hated the joy and better things of life. How this old "grouch" was changed to the kindest of souls and brought to a realization of his past meanness and thorough detestability, forms one of the most beautiful stories ever written—and its lesson endures the year 'round, and world-wide; for in every community there lives a "Scrooge" to this very day. Bluebird has taken advantage of every opportunity to visualize the Dickens classic in most effective photographic form, and an entertainment both beneficial and wholesome is assured in presentations of "The Right to Be Happy."

ARCADE

W. S. Hart Thursday.

A western drama of an entirely different kind is "Truthful Tulliver," the new Triangle play starring Wm. S. Hart, which will be seen at the Arcade theater Thursday only. The central figure is not a "bad man," but a good man, who nevertheless knows how to use his fists, ride a horse, throw a lasso and handle a gun. This clean-hearted, hard-hitting individual is a newspaper man by occupation, and drifts into a mining camp called "Glory Hole" to start a paper. In the course of time he finds it necessary either to take himself and his paper out of Glory Hole or rid the place of certain individuals who don't like his honesty and decency. Tulliver and the paper stay, after some startling adventures and thrilling feats, in the course of which the editor wins not only a reputation but a bride. The play has two love stories woven into it, Hart's leading woman being Alma Reubens, seen with Douglas Fairbanks in two plays recently.

Milk Alone Supplies Elements of Growth

Should Form Part of Human Diet for at Least First 25 Years of Life

University of Washington, Feb. 13—Milk can alone supply all the necessary materials for growth and repair of the human body, since it contains all of the food principles, writes Professor Fffie I. Raitt, head of the department of home economics of the University of Washington, in the January number of Better Business, a magazine published monthly by the university extension division.

Miss Raitt believes that milk should form a part of the diet as long as there is growth. She points out that it has distinct advantages for adult life as well. For the first twenty-five years some milk should be included in each day's diet, she says.

"Milk contains protein, the repair or tissue-forming element," says Miss Raitt. "It is the only food which contains nitrogen. Carbohydrates, that give its starches and sugars, and the fats, are the fuel foods. They are burned in the body and supply energy, which may be manifested as heat or motion.

"The protein is capable of being burned in the same way. Some of the daily supply of this food element goes for fuel. There are also present the inorganic elements necessary to the nutrition of man, controlling as they do the contraction of muscles, maintaining neutrality in the blood, and composing the largest part of the framework of the body."

Noting that La Grande fire and police chiefs have issued a challenge to the world as "scattergun" shooters, and that Pendleton officials have accepted the challenge, the Baker Herald rises to remark that "if it were a contest in preserving the peace and fire fighting the Baker officials would be in the front rank."—Oregon Journal.

It is estimated that four-fifths of the water available for irrigation and domestic use in the state of Oregon comes from the timber clad slopes of the National forests. The average acre of National forest land in the state sends to the streams sixteen times as much water as does the average acre of land outside the forest boundaries.
