SHERRY'S

SHERRY'S TODAY—
SOMETHING NEW

A unique feature about the new William Fox photoplay "The Battle of Life" is the method of opening the story. The first flash on the screen shows a group of rats at work in the dark cellar of a house. This scene gradually fades out and in place of the rats, the group of crooks who play so important a part in the development of the story appears.

Thus the view changes from the rats of the animal kingdom to the rats of society.

Gladys Coburn, the dainty William Fox star, has one of her biggest roles in "The Battle of Life," and she has played it with her customary skill and appeal. Art Acord is featured with Miss Coburn.

Mary (Miss Coburn), daughter of a crook, Tom Boland, and sweetheart of his pal, Dave Karns, determines to give up her old life because she does not want her little brother Jimmy to submit to criminal influences. Leaving the house she wanders in the park where she meets Mrs. Westworth, a wealthy woman, who hires her as maid. Tom Boland and Dave Karns learn of the girl's position and try to obtain her aid in robbing the house of her mistress. She refuses, but they "pull off the job" alone and her father is shot.

A detective and his stool-pigeon begin bounding Mary. She loses her position and is arrested, later being released on parole. After many trials and tribulations, during which she "goes straight," despite police interference, she is reunited with her sweetheart Dave, who has reformed.

Cove News Notes

Cove, Ore., Feb. 22—(Special)—The Eastern Star entertained the members and invited guests at a Valentine party February 14 at the Masonic hall. The hall was beautifully decorated in Valentine designs, colors red and white. Mrs. Ethel Booth was the designer. Those present from out of town were Mesdames LeRoy Lay and Hal Rees of La Grande. Refreshments were served and a pleasant social evening enjoyed.

Appropriate exercises are being observed in most of the rooms at the public school today—Washington's birthday.

A BROAD BRIM FOR EASTER

There's something to the Easter hat—at least ten inches of brim. Rose geranium crepe, headed with soft gray, rose and white colored beads makes up this lovely "sunshade." The handbag is also beaded, for the red of the moment is to have the hat trimming repeated in track or some necessary.

requested to be present.

The moving picture show given at the Maccabee hall Saturday evening on the "Life of Our Savior" was largely attended. Incidents in the life of the Savior were portrayed in a dramatic and realistic manner which was further enhanced by the scenic background in which the beautiful color scheme and dignity of design lent an influence in harmony with the sacred subject. Not only was the hall's seating capacity taxed to its utmost but standing room was at a premium, which fact speaks louder than words that Cove appreciates and will patronize high class entertainments and stands with extended hand and open purse ready to receive shows of an educational character which our children may attend without that unwholesome influence which many of the so-called popular plays exert.

Under the auspices of our public school, William L. Finley, state biologist and nature historian, gave a reel entertainment on wild birds and animals. While the primary object of this show was to educate and enlist the sympathy of school children, the adult attendance was unusually large for an afternoon meeting.

The pictures thrown upon the screen were highly educational in character both to child and adult; vividly depicting the difficulties under which our fur and feathered denizens of the forest rear their young. The camera revealed the fact that frequently the mother instinct is so strong that she will sacrifice her own life in the defense of her young. We have an abiding faith that any boy who saw this play will never rob a bird's nest or wantonly destroy harmless animal life.

Mrs. R. C. Coddinton of La Grande, who is representing the New Bone Corset company, was in town last week on business, also visiting her sister, Mrs. Hugh McCall.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Trippeer left Friday of last week for Portland and Eugene and other points to visit with friends and relatives.

The last of the series of card parties given by the Guild met at the home of Mrs. Jabe Conley, February 17. Those receiving the highest score during the season were Mrs. John Dean and E. C. Reese and were entertained by the Guild. Refreshments were served and a social evening enjoyed.

Mrs. Cora Richards has sold her interest in the confectionery and restaurant to Reuben Daniels, who took possession Wednesday, February 21.

Coming to Arcade Theatre Tomorrow When Oliver Asked For More

SCENE FROM "OLIVER TWIST," A PARAMOUNT PICTURE PRODUCED BY LASKY.

This is an exact reproduction of one of the celebrated George Cruikshank's original sketches for the first edition of Charles Dickens' immortal story, "Oliver Twist." It is a scene from the Lasky adaptation of the story for the Paramount Program in which Marie Doro stars in the role of Oliver. Immediately upon "asking for more" Oliver is thrust into solitary confinement, like a criminal, by the poorhouse authorities. This is one of the drawings which formed the center of the great Dickens-Cruikshank controversy when the gifted caricaturist claimed that it was really his illustrating of the first "Oliver Twist" stories which led the novelist to expand the tale to its present form. This is one of the scenes which was literally taken from the book by the Lasky Company.
