Practice Pay-day Saving

In these days of high prices and extravagant tastes, it is natural for the entire contents of the pay envelope to slip away unless a careful plan of regular savings has been adopted. The year is still young. This is an especially good time to begin and practice pay-day saving. Thousands vouch for the success of the plan.

THE FORUM

Mr. Anderson Presents His Views.
Cove, Ore., Feb. 28.—(To the Editor of The Observer.)—In the issue of The Observer dated Feb. 24, there appeared an item from Cove, entitled, "Cove School Meeting Restores Harmony." While the title of the item speaks the truth, the body of the item is rather misleading. In presenting this article it is not my object to stir up a disagreeable mess which has so peacefully settled, but since it was worth giving publicity to a little matter which would have been handled in Union or La Grande without half of the population of either place knowing about it. But in a little town like Cove, when anything unusual happens it is usually written up by one of the radicals on one or the other side, and then if it is something very pleasant the dispensing Editor usually usurps the honors to his own town by referring to the incident happening in the valley, or a certain number of miles in a certain direction from the town in which the paper is published. It would seem that Cove is right in line with the truth of that old adage, "Laugh, and the world laughs with you; Weep, and you weep alone. When Cove or any of its citizens has captured the honors of distinction, by raising just a little better fruit than can be produced elsewhere, by making original displays and calling honorable attention to this part of the State from the other parts of the nation, These and divers other honors have been shared with the County, and neighboring towns. But when it comes to anything disagreeable happening in our midst, it would seem that Cove is put in a class by its self and if an article is presented from Cove it is so one-sided as to leave the impression that a Coveite is anything but a respectable human being, and the impression is given to the outside public that Cove consists of outlaws, ruffians and ignoramuses. If the article published under the above title was worth presenting, it surely was worth presenting in a true light, and not made a one-sided affair as it must surely appear to a non resident of Cove.

To any one having heard any of the particulars from the parents or students it must seem that those parents in attendance at the meeting might be a set of ignoramous and light thinking individuals to approve of a course, pursued and adopted by teacher and board. When in truth it was unanimously resolved to forget the past and stand by the teacher and school-board. According to my opinion there is a vast difference between "standing by" and justifying one acts. While the said teacher is an admirable young lady and above reproach morally, socially and in intelligence, Still the fact, remains, that unless there is an abnormal number of students who have misrepresented matters to their parents and other the course pursued by the teacher is not one to be approved by any parent or one who has the welfare of pupils at heart. According to the statement of the pupils themselves, they have subjected their teacher to conditions which would have justified her in any approved method of punishment. And each and every scholar would have respected her for the chastisement instead of resorting to the more seeming, mild way of a superfluous amount of English language and words and titles which any American from the youngest to the oldest will object to. While we sympathize with the teacher for the unscholarly and unmanly way in which they conducted themselves Still we can't hold her blameless for not having resources of her own to handling pupils who have temporarily failed to bring or retain lady like and gentlemanly manners in the school room. While the young man of the high school in question was guilty of an act unbecoming a student. Still that could not justify the act of the board of drawing up a lengthy, technical document setting forth not only his real faults but some imaginary ones and having it read before the high school and some of the upper grades. Had the young man been a degenerate we could comprehend this unusual method of expulsion. But being a young man commanding a little more than the average respect of the community holding his respectul number of credits in school, and the manly way in which he admitted his guilt and apologized for them gave proof that he was a manly student, figuratively, Temporarily off on the wrong leg. While the writer attended that particular meeting he failed to observe any voluntary speaking by any of the students, and of the three or more responses by students called on to speak and state their side we would hesitate some, before we would call them all apologies. In justice to Mrs. A. E. Ivenhoe, while she was present and the good she did can not be over estimated, still, she expressed an earnest desire not to be referred to as acting in her official capacity but wished to be considered as one of us. We feel that this matter which might have been handled in a larger place with little or no publicity has already gained too much notoriety. But since it has been flashed in the public eye it should have been done so that all concerned might receive their just amount of blame as well as praise. Nevertheless we are thankful for the harmony of the meeting and the peaceful ending and hope that all parties concerned may profit by past experiences otherwise we are reasonably assured that the fire of contention is merely smouldering instead of quenched. Yours most respectfully BUNYAN E. ANDERSON.

An Atchison old maid has stopped giving advice to married women. She noticed a married sister was seldom at home. The sister went to parties, and picture shows afternoons, and dances at night. Slept late mornings, and her husband, who had to get to his work early, ate his breakfast alone. A few weeks ago the old maid read the riot act to her sister. Said: "We went to a lot of trouble and expense to land you a husband, and I will not stand it to have you back on our hands again. Your husband will resent your social activity, and neglect of him, and your home. You must reform." The married sister did. When her husband came down to breakfast the next morning, she sat at the table ready to pour the coffee. It gave him such a shock he was unable to work all that day. When he went home to dinner his wife met him at the door. He felt dizzy and faint. That evening she remained at home. The man has disappeared. He sent a note to the old maid sister in which he stated his reasons for leaving. He wrote: "Your sister is acting queer. She is not like other women. It gets on my nerves to have her get down to breakfast before I do, and be at home evenings. Other men's wives do not act in this manner. It is more than I can stand. I shall bring a suit for divorce, and will make satisfactory arrangements for alimony. Of course I could have her tried for sanity, but will not subject your family, which has been kind to me to that humiliation."—Atchison Globe.

There is no function of a Light and Power Company more important than making its lines and apparatus safe for the public and its employees. We spare no expense and every precaution is taken to accomplish this but we want to appeal to you to assist us in preventing accidents that we cannot provide against, and to do this it is only necessary to remember a few simple rules.
First—NEVER, UNDER ANY CONDITIONS, TOUCH ANY POLE, WIRE OR OTHER ELECTRICAL APPARATUS.
Second—NEVER TOUCH THE BODY OR CLOTHING OF ANY PERSON WHO IS IN CONTACT WITH A LIVE WIRE. You would not be able to help them and would probably be injured or killed in trying. In a serious emergency a live wire may be moved with a dry stick or wooden pole especially if you stand on a dry wooden surface. Even then the wire might accidentally touch you especially if it is broken, as a broken wire, charged with electricity, has a tendency to writhe and twist.
Third—NOTIFY OUR NEAREST OFFICE OR PLANT AT OUR EXPENSE OF ANY ACCIDENTS OR OF ANY BROKEN WIRE OR POLE THAT COMES TO YOUR ATTENTION.
Get one of our free service books. It will tell you how to avoid accidents; what to do when one occurs and in addition contains much other valuable and interesting information.
