Fashion

Margaret Mason's Fashion Letter. (Written for the United Press.) Beads are going to waist this year. Yet plenty are left 'tis said to account for the lot. That whether or not Have gone to Milady's head.

New York, April 12.—This is the season of the belting reign. Belts certainly reign supreme as the fad of the moment and the shops and waistlines of the fair are simply flooded with them, provided of course that they are beaded. For a belt without a bead on these days is as flat as a draught of malted brew is without the same.

Some of the beaded belts are flat anyway. These are the long flat girdles elaborately and solidly beaded 17 gayly colored designs with fringed ends of beads that are worn with the loose, straight lined Chemise gowns. These are suggestive of and indeed many are fashioned by Indians—South Central and our own North American tribes. Indian rope girdles of beads with beaded tassellated ends are also popular.

For wear outside of the new loose silk coats and wraps are the Oriental and Royal girdles of metal links alternating with large beads, disks or squares of imitation jade, cryspherase and lapis lazuli or with cameos, Chinese coins or jet nail heads.

The more fantastic the color combinations of these girdles, the more elaborately chased and carved the metal links, the more effective and stunning they are. Almost all of them finish with omnipresent tassel in metal or beads.

Though she struggles to be free, lovely women still paradoxically loads herself with chains. Not content even with these beaded chain belts and girdles she further shackles herself by gayly slipping her neck into a rope of beads and metal links that ape the metal girdles on a finer scale. An artistic one of slender silver links broken here and there with balls of blue lapis added just the right touch to a charming putty toned garbardinie trimmed in embroidered bits of lapis blue and putty tassels worn the other day. Really nowadays your costume is not complete unless you wear one of the metal girdles or neck chains, earrings and finger ring whose beaded charms bring out the telling color note of your gown.

Behold, the evolution of the bead certainly makes the busy B. From bag to belt from belt to bosom and from bosom to "bean" we have it. For now every swager bonnet has a bit of beading on it. Some of them are beaded to beat the band with bands of beads and yet others rely solely on a single ornament of beads in front, back or side or wherever the beads will be most telling.

The ornaments rather run to animal effects and beaded bunnies, birds, felines and fishes perch rakishly about a bonnet. Chanticleer in gaudy beadery is a popular favorite though it is not necessarily a cocked hat that sports this cocky design.

Beads of wood, beads of glass and beads of every known composition, color and design adorn our headgear and thus the bead craze may be said to have reached its proper level for you see whether on bead or bonnets you can't keep a good bead down.

It is odd to pause in the midst of our beads and consider how all the world has a beaded bend in common, and how all the four corners of the earth meet us on a fashionable footing or rather beading. From China we gather in a glory of beads and Indian and Turkey lay further ones at our fashionable shrine. We sport Indian beads from the three American glass and pearl beads from Italy and to account for the impetus given wooden beads in our hat ornamentation comes this story.

A village of French peasants for years had plied their wooden bead craft. When their village was shelled by the German guns the survivors fled to Paris. Here knowing nothing else save their life work of fashioning beads of wood they returned to their craft. They turned them out to be eagerly seized upon by the Parisian modistes as just the novelty they yearned for. Hence as usual the reply to all our present day fads and fancies; the war, mesdames, is again the answer.

ADORABLE MIDDY.

This one-piece cut on middy lines is of pink chambray beautifully smocked across the yoke and pockets. Cross stitching and smocking are to be used more than ever to adorn childish gowns.

African Dates in California. A number of date palm trees have been brought from Africa to California where dates are now raised successfully.

For motorcycles there has been invented a pump that automatically fills a tire with air as a machine is running.

Have a reason, but don't always be talking about your reasons.

Mother's Doll Story

Adopted Friends

You children must never forget that since the great war lots of little children have not had nearly enough bread and milk. Oftentimes thousands of children go to bed hungry.

So some kind folks thought how happy it would be if the children in America, where most children have a good supper before they go to bed, would buy some dolls. The money they paid for the dolls, you see, would help to buy bread and milk for hungry children.

So hundreds of kind people set to work to paint, make, stuff, dress and sell dolls for the little European children. Not to play with, you understand, but to be sold to children who can play the money going for bread.

It is interesting to know how many American children are playing with dolls all dressed in bits of silk and velvet, just like the peasants of Europe. Then there are little boy and girl dolls from Poland, Jan and Hanska by name, and no end of dolls who wear wooden shoes like the Belgian children.

These European dollies say that they like to be adopted into American nurseries. Little folks here are very kind to them and find them delightful to take to bed and to push about outdoors in a cart.

Jack and the Clock.
"Why is it that I am like the clock?"
Said laughing Jack to me,
"Because I have two hands and a face,
As any one can see."

The difference 'twixt the clock and Jack is quite too plainly seen.
I wish they were alike in this:
Its face and hands are clean,
—Children's Friend.

Baking Day.
Baking day is full of joys
For little girls and little boys.
Sister bakes the cake, true,
But brother eats it when she's through!

These Dear Girls.
(Boston Transcript.)
Edith—Jack told me I was so interesting and so beautiful.
Marie—And yet you will trust yourself for life with a man who begins deceiving you so early.
