SHERRY'S

BEAUTY IN THE PICTURE PERILOUS.

The thousands of spectators who have sat spell-bound before certain scenes of "A Daughter of the Gods" which comes to Sherry's April 28 and 29, have wondered whether Annette Kellermann in the title role of William Fox' picture beautiful was not in actual peril of being dashed against the jagged rocks, as she sought to make a landing from the thundering sea while bound hand and foot. There is no camera trickery in these thrilling scenes. They were actual as the reality could make them, and on several occasions the star of the million dollar picture was taken unconscious from the surf. A first aid crew, with a regular hospital outfit, accompanied her and the two hundred pretty mermaids during all of these dangerous demonstrations.

In swimming the real motive power is derived from the outward kick of the legs, the arms merely serving to keep afloat the upper portion of the body. A mermaid having her lower limbs immovably encased in a tail appendage of glistening scales is deprived of the propulsion so essential to a swimmer; and only by long and continued practice can this difficulty be overcome. Put a swimmer thus laughingly refer to them as 'the mark of the mermaid.'

"The gigantic tides that whirl in and out of St. Anne's Bay, Jamaica, tugged and pulled at these mermaids and dragged them over rough, jagged rocky ledges not once but dozens of times as the girls were sent back to their positions to be photographed again and again in nearly similar positions. Twice two of the young beauties narrowly escaped drowning and were rushed ashore in launches to receive first aid and resuscitation on the beach.

encumbered in a heavy surf, and unusual skill and strength are required to escape being overwhelmed. Before the picture was completed all bore badges of courage in a way of cruel scars.

"It will amaze outsiders, but does not amaze those who were privileged to watch this picture in the making, to know that not one of those scores of swimming girls who are mermaids in the picture escaped either injuries or scars," says Mr. Fox. "These scars or marks became symbols of service in a production destined to make motion picture history and the young women

ARCADE

"FRIDAY, THE THIRTEENTH." "Friday, the Thirteenth," is the title of the World Film photoplay drama which will be the attraction at the Arcade theatre on Sunday only, and will be shown in connection with the Boston Show Girls. The title is taken from the day and date on which one of the most original of stock market stories was supposed to have taken place. A great furore was created a few years past when Thomas

W. Lawson, well-known financier and millionaire, became contributing editor for a high-class popular magazine. One of his famous stories was "Friday, the Thirteenth." The story deals with the phenomenal success of Robert Brownley on the stock exchange, so great that he was called "The Napoleon of Wall Street."

ADDITIONAL SOCIETY

The Kaffee Klatch club met at the home of Miss Margaret Anson Friday afternoon. Mrs. A. Andrews assisted the hostess in entertaining. Bridge was the feature of the day and Mrs. E. E. Kirtley won the honors.

The Owassia club was entertained at the home of Miss Ethel Hanley last week. The young ladies took their needle work and spent a very pleasant afternoon, after which refreshments were served.

PLANS MADE TO HELP WITH FARM LABOR

FORCES OF STATE TO BE MOBILIZED TO SUPPLY MEN TO PLANT THE CROPS

County Agriculturist Paul H. Spillman, recently received a letter from Paul V. Maris, county agent leader of Corvallis, giving a solution for the inadequate supply of labor to plant the normal acreage of crops.

Mr. Maris states that the following plan has been adopted for meeting this situation: "By arrangement between this office and the office of Public Employment Bureau of the Portland office, each county agent office is hereby designated as a branch Public Employment Bureau of the Portland office. And you are asked to give wide spread publicity to this fact immediately and call upon the farmers of your community to report their labor demands to you. You will transmit these orders to N. F. Johnson, director Public Employment Bureau, Portland. Mr. Johnson will have the co-operation of the Chamber of Commerce, the State School officials, the Governor of the State, and such other agencies as will be necessary to make the labor available.

"There are for example, 19,000 boys in the schools of the state over 14 and under 20 and it is reasonable to assume that there are in the neighborhood of 10,000 over 15 and under 19, the minimum military age. There are also in the neighborhood of 5000 men in Portland not regularly employed. A plan will probably be worked out
